EDDLEMAN REPORT
HIT BY HORNSBY

'Doesn't Mean Anything,'
Police Chief Asserts,
Insists on Full Story.

Detective Lieutenant R. P. Burnett and three aides took the trail yesterday afternoon under stringent orders from Police Chief Hornsby to clear up the spectacular descent of robbed and hooded men Saturday night in which there were six reported kidnappings—two of them in prominent business district locations.

"Get me the facts—all of them," Hornsby ordered. "Regardless of whether it was a 'stunt' or the real thing it was a horrible thing to happen in the streets of Atlanta. I don't like it and I won't have it going on."

Possibility of grand jury inquiry was indicated last night by Frank R. Mitchell, foreman of the January-February Fulton grand jury.

To "Watch Developments."
"We'll watch developments, and if anything comes up which shows rowdiness, terrorism or interfering with rights of citizens, the grand jury members will be just as indignant as other law-abiding citizens," he said.

"I can't say at this time we'll do anything definite until we see what develops further."

As the detectives launched their probe—which was to include inquiry into the attitude of the police department—hospitals and physicians, questioned by newspapermen, were unable to offer any trace of the supposed six vanished men.

One of the victims, reported by a score of witnesses to have been injured severely in being thrown by eight men into one of three automobiles at the southeast corner of Broad and Alabama streets, was expected perforce to seek medical aid eventually.

A theory was held that the victims, whether acting voluntarily or under duress, had been intimidated by their captors to return home and maintain strict silence.

Eddleman Report.
Chief Hornsby was especially critical of the report made by Patrolman Roy Eddleman of the second kidnapping of the night, staged before crowds on Peachtree street near Cain street.

This report, which Eddleman was required to come from his home and write late Saturday night, simply read:

"I respectfully report that while on duty on Peachtree street, between Cain and Ellis streets, about 8:40 o'clock, in front of Woolworth's 5-and-10 cent store, a car drove up with five men in it. They were wearing some sort of gown. They picked up a man

Wizard Evans Returns To Begin Probe Today

Dr. Hiram W. Evans, imperial wizard of the Ku Klux Klan, returned to Atlanta from Augusta last night and said he would launch a thorough investigation into the reports today. He added he might have a "statement later in the day."

Dr. Evans also disclosed he had been subpoenaed to appear before the economy committee of the Georgia house of representatives in connection with an alleged sale of asphalt emulsion to the State Highway Department and that this would require a good portion of the day. He denied handling such an order.

Oberlin M. Carter Claims
Court-Martial Due to Hatred, Jealousy.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

Echoes of an international scandal that exploded in Georgia more than 40 years ago and rocked army and social circles throughout the world, were heard again last night as Oberlin M. Carter, the "American Dreyfus," said he would carry his unceasing flight for vindication "direct to the White House."

White-haired Carter, possessed of vigor belying his 82 years, said at Chicago he planned to reopen dusty records of an 1898 court-martial in connection with fraud charges at Savannah which brought about the shame of dismissal from the service and the bitterness of a prison sentence.

The case of the brilliant former army engineer in charge of harbor improvements at Savannah—whose record at West Point was topped only by that of the genius General Robert E. Lee—has touched off comment and controversy

Heavy Smoke Hangs

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

MADISON, Ga., Feb. 5.—A stubborn fire of undetermined origin gave firefighters a difficult battle for six hours and swept business establishments in the heart of this ante-bellum town of 2,900 population early today.

The fire started in the Trammell building, a two-story brick structure, and burned it to the ground. Total loss was estimated at between $40,000 and $50,000. A number of stores were damaged by flames and water.

A company of firemen from Athens, 30 miles distant, hurried here to aid Fire Chief Will Shouse and his volunteers. Dense smoke hung over the area for hours. Hundreds of persons from nearby communities motored to the scene.

The fire, believed to have been smoldering for several hours, was discovered in the Trammell building, erected about 1900, at about 8:45 o'clock this morning. A negro filling station attendant on his way to work saw the fire and immediately gave the alarm.

The ground floor of the Trammell building contained a variety store, and the upper rooms were used as storerooms. The building was gutted. Flames leaped to the adjoining Vason building, another two-story brick structure, and damaged a chain grocery store and a drugstore on the street floor.

On the second floor, flames burned out several offices; headquarters of the Masonic lodge; the Southern Bell Telephone exchange and five rooms of the hospital of Dr. William C. McGeary.

The roof in the rear of the Vason building collapsed, but no one was injured. The drugstore and chain grocery were damaged principally by water. The buildings were on Main street, in the center of the block, facing the post office on the square.

Water also damaged the Western Union office and the branch of the Georgia Power Company, both adjoining the fire-swept buildings.

Patty Berg Wins 4th Miami Meet By Defeating Dorothy Kirby, 3-1

Atlanta Medalist Turns

Against the Champion

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb. 5. (AP)—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, won the Miami Biltmore women's golf tournament for the fourth consecutive year today by defeating Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, 3 and 1, in the 36-hole final.

The Atlanta medalist fought valiantly, downing a 25-foot putt on the 34th hole and many other times showing championship form, but the red-haired Patty was stroking at her best.

Miss Berg got into trouble on the 32d hole, driving into a trap while her opponent made a clean approach, chipped to a foot of the hole and sank the ball on the next shot. Patty required four strokes. But on the final hole Miss Kirby hooked into the underbrush, was on in four and required two putts. Patty holed out in four.

One up at the end of the morning round, the Minneapolis girl kept her lead.

The 19th hole was halved, then Patty took two and halved the 22d. On the next, Miss Kirby was 20 feet short on her second but won the hole with 4 strokes to Patty's 5. Patty took the next, then lost two in a row and halved the 27th.

The freckled-faced young woman took the 28th with a birdie 4, halved the 29th, then fired an eagle to hole out in the 30th with Smashed During Test.

TOKYO, Monday, Feb. 6.—(UP)—The Navy ministry announced today that six members of the crew of the submarine I-63, which sank in Bungo channel on February 2 after colliding with another during exercises, had been rescued.

The ministry said that rescue operations were continuing, but that 81 others aboard the submarine probably were dead.

The navy spokesman did not explain the nature of the rescue operations.

The I-63 was one of 12 submarines of the Kaigun type, of 1,635 tons displacement and with a cruising range of 16,000 miles, sufficient to cross the Pacific and return without refueling. It was built in 1928.

Lilienthal Pauses in Atlanta On Way to Isle of No Phones

TVA Official Beams in Anticipation of Getting Away
From It All for Several Weeks; Hails Commonwealth & Southern Deal.

Thoughts of "an island that doesn't have a telephone" brought smiles last night to the pale face of David E. Lilienthal, vice chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The 40-year-old executive—around whose desk have swirled some of the warmest New Deal scraps—stopped in Atlanta between trains en route to Florida from his home at Norris, Tenn., the city that TVA built.

Asked where he was going, Lilienthal, who has the build of an "old grad" football player and the alert, anxious look of a prosecuting attorney about to get a conviction, replied:

"I'm going to an island that doesn't have a telephone. Going to get away from it all for several weeks. No, I won't say where it is."

Anticipates Rest.
Was it on the west coast or east coast? Near Miami or where he was asked. His face beaming in anticipation of a really restful spot, Lilienthal uttered two words: "West coast."

A bit later, however, he nodded an affirmative to a direct question if the island were near Sarasota. Mild-mannered, speaking in pleasant, conversational tone, Lilienthal chatted readily about the recent agreement between TVA and Commonwealth & Southern Corporation in Tennessee, an arrangement that closed an event.

30,000 HOMELESS IN FLOOD REGION

Kentucky, West Virginia
Faced With Greatest Task of Rehabilitation.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 5.—(AP)—

Fears of an extensive flood eased tonight as the Ohio river leveled off along a long expanse but relief agencies faced the task of caring for an estimated 30,000 refugees in four states. The death toll stood at six.

Kentucky and West Virginia faced the biggest job of rehabilitation after mountain streams covered homes in mining areas.

The Ohio was falling from Pittsburgh to Wheeling and forecasters said the crest probably had been reached along eastern Ohio and West Virginia points where the water inundated low-land homes.

United States Meteorologist W. C. Devereaux forecast fair and warmer weather for Kentucky and West Virginia, with possible rain tomorrow night. He added that the showers would have little effect on the river stages.

Delayed reports of flooded Ohio tributaries in Kentucky prompted the Weather Bureau here to revise its estimate of the Ohio's crest to 58 or 59 feet. However, W. B. Schomer, assistant meteorologist, reported the river was stationary from Parkersburg, W. Va., to Ashland, Ky., and would level off at Portsmouth, Ohio, tonight.

Mrs. Ella Layne Brown, executive director of the Red Cross here, said national headquarters in Washington advised here at noon that an estimated 6,500 to 7,000 families were seriously affected in Ohio, Kentucky, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Engineers reported that at Salyersville, Ky., near the head waters of the Licking river in south central Kentucky, the flood crest had been 20.9 feet, topping the previous record by a foot, and surged into the first floor of the courthouse there.

The river at 8 a. m. had risen to within fractions of 61 feet, or 10 feet above flood, at Ashland, Kentucky.

5.—(AP)—Fleeing Spanish government armies began a mass flight into France tonight after their leaders had abandoned Catalonia to conquering insurgent armies.

Government leaders were reported violently split over continuing the war.

President Manuel Azana, former Premier Jose Giral, Luis Companys, President of the Catalan government, and many of Premier Juan Negrin's ministers were said to have appealed to him to surrender immediately to Generalissimo Franco.

Negrin Carries On.

But Negrin, with a few of his followers, including Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez Del Vayo, was said to have insisted on continuing resistance in central Spain, where the government-held area includes Valencia and Madrid.

Azana and Giral were en route to Paris. Aides of both said they had broken forever with Negrin.

Premier Negrin entered France at 3:45 a. m. (9:45 p. m. Atlanta time) Monday, with four of his cabinet members in a fleet of eight automobiles.

The cabinet members and their bodyguards had driven from Aguilana, just across the border from Le Perthus, where they had held a cabinet meeting earlier in the night.

They were understood to be seeking to return to central Spain to continue the war.

Broken government forces began crossing the frontier into France late in the afternoon, after the French government decided to open the border to the escaping fighters.

Troops Cross Border.
Almost 10,000 had entered France before nightfall when French authorities decided to close the gates until dawn tomorrow when more weary, beaten government soldiers will be admitted.

French army officers said late tonight they were prepared for 150,000 government fighters to cross the frontier.

They believed the remaining

Witness Retraces Route of Hoodlums

Car Bearing Youths
Trailed Caravan on Meandering Path; Saw
Two Gang Kidnapings.

A group of young boys and girls, in an automobile Saturday night, were attracted by an automobile parade of white-robed men moving through the town. Curiously, the young people followed the caravan, believing it to be a grotesque stunt. Members of the party supplied information which appeared in the Sunday morning editions. Yesterday, one of the young people retraced the route, describing the actions of the hooded men to Herman Hancock, member of The Constitution staff. Here is a chronological story of what they saw:

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

A witness to the wild ride of hooded hoodlums and at least two of the six Saturday night snatching from Atlanta streets yesterday pointed out the route and described the meandering path and two rendezvous of the caravan of participating cars.

Proceeding along Peachtree between Houston and Luckie, the witness pointed out the spot where the first kidnapping took place—just west of the Candler building. A short struggle ensued, but hooded figures piled out of the six or eight automobiles composing the raiding squad and quickly overcame opposition, bundled the victim into one of the cars and dashed off again.

Attracted by commotion, the car in which the witnesses rode Saturday night, proceeded up Peachtree street, turned to the right at Pryor and again at the rear of the kidnapping procession proceeding southward on Houston street.

Rear: Miss Bonnie Patton, daughter of Representative Nat Patton, Texas, first vice president; Miss Charlotte King and Miss Mary Marvin Moss, niece of Representative Marvin Jones, Texas, secretary.

At Courtland street, they swung north to Ellis. The witnesses drove into a filling station and, while making a purchase they did not need, they saw the cars containing the kidnapped man and the hooded figures turn right into Ellis street and meet two cars bearing policemen at the Foremost Dairy drive-way and the adjacent vacant lot. Policemen and the figures shook hands and greeted each other. The figures, with the kidnapped man still huddled in one of the cars, then swung from Ellis into Piedmont avenue and proceeded to Forrest avenue.

Second Victim.

Between Bedford place and Hilliard street on Forrest avenue they drew up. A man was standing on the sidewalk. Flashlights were played on him, he was accosted, resisted, was subdued promptly and thus the second victim was added to the drive. The eyewitnesses saw him thrust into one of the cars and again the caravan was off.

At Boulevard, they swung again to the right and proceeded directly to the Boulevard and Berne street entrance to Grant park. From there they went to the little band pavilion in Grant park, just inside the park from the intersection of Park avenue and Berne street.

Here again the group halted, and the car bearing the witnesses stopped. Hooded figures came to their car saying: "Let's get going. We don't want you here."

The witnesses drove off, and in a very few minutes the caravan started again. Cutting from Grant park, the caravan headed into Georgia avenue and at least one of the cars noticed it was still being followed. That car cut from the line and attempted unsuccessfully to block the witnesses.

Car Leaves Caravan.

Down Georgia avenue to McDaniel the cars dashed with the group of witnesses trailing them. At McDaniel, they turned to the right again to Glenn; proceeded down Glenn to Humphries and turned left. One of the cars in the group, however, turned left on McDaniel street, abandoning the others to complete the route followed.

On Humphries, the cars with the hooded figures stopped at 681, the home of L. L. Spivey, a cotton mill employee.

When that point was reached in the ride over the route yesterday, reporters interviewed Spivey. He said: "It was a string of cars extending back most to Glenn street. The cars were filled with hooded figures and I thought they were Klan people."

"They flashed lights on my house, and I heard one say: 'We just must have the wrong number.'"

No One Taken.

It was at this point that Saturday the witnesses thought another victim was added to the two already taken. Yesterday they said after the Spivey interview that they probably were mistaken, because Spivey was definite in his assertion that they had the wrong address and that no one was taken there.

When they left the Spivey residence, they proceeded down Humphries street to Stephens street. On one of the corners is an old store now used as a church, and a large crowd of persons was gathered there. The cars, however, did not stop, but swerved into Stephens street and proceeded to Stewart avenue, where they turned left.

From Stewart, they turned right on Gillette street; then right into Tift avenue, left again into Shelton and thence to Murphy avenue. Because of the fact that members of the raiding party were so insistent about not being followed, the witnesses turned at Shelton street instead of following to Gillette, they said yesterday, and when they reached Murphy avenue, the lost track of the raiders. Bewildered, they parked a few minutes, and a police car with its siren going full blast came by Murphy avenue and Shelton, and they followed it hoping that it would take them again to the raiders. Instead, the car was going to a minor automobile wreck out on Lez street.

The witnesses then went home and called The Constitution.

OLD 'DREYFUS CASE' WILL GO TO F. D. R.

He becomes a slave at the mercy of unscrupulous prosecutors, with no protection under our constitution or laws.

Turned Down by Court. His case has already been the subject of more than a score of rulings in federal courts. He has petitioned a senate investigating committee and the War and Justice Departments, in vain. A year ago, the United States supreme court ruled he was not entitled to a review of the court-martial verdict.

Carter was a brilliant army engineer with the rank of captain when fate singled him for his dramatic role. He had graduated from West Point in 1880, with a top scholastic record.

The number two man on the 1880 list was George W. Goethals, destined to build the Panama canal. Captain Carter was detailed to Savannah in 1884, as assistant to the district engineer. Four years later, he became chief of the area. He pushed to completion a $3,500,000 project at Savannah and Cumberland Sound, on the Florida border.

He was then appointed army engineer on the Isthmian Canal commission, the chief task of which, at that time, was decision between Panama and Nicaragua routes. Carter recommended the former.

Noted Beauty. He applied for, and was given, the post of military attaché to the American embassy at London. He and Mrs. Carter, the daughter of Roger Fulger Westcott, wealthy New Yorker, moved in Mayfair's most select circles. Mrs. Carter was one of the noted beauties of the day.

Carter was named American delegate to an international engineering congress at Stockholm.

over there. And I looked across the street in the direction of Woodworth's 5-and-10-cent store and saw the men wearing white robes standing on each side of a white man dressed in overalls.

"As I made my way across the street and was about 15 feet from them, the hooded men put the man that they had in custody into a dark blue or black two-door Plymouth coach bearing a 1938 Georgia license tag. I was unable to get the license number of the car. The car contained three other men wearing white robes. The man driving was about 23 to 25 years old and he was not wearing a mask. I clearly saw his face."

"There was two lines of traffic between me and the car containing the hooded men. The man dressed in overalls did not make any outcry and made very little resistance while being placed in the car. And before I could get to the place, the car drove off. I called Captain Ellis and told him what had happened and he told me to make a report, and I told him I would be in a little later to make the report on the occurrence. The above happened about 8:40 p. m., on February 4, 1939. Respectfully,

"ROY EDDLEMAN." Eddleman was declared by newspapermen and two witnesses to the kidnapping to have said at the time: "They got the man they were after—they won't hurt him," and to have told protesting observers: "It's none of your damned business. If you don't watch out, they'll get you, too."

Officers Saw Band. A factual description of the latter part of the night's activities, furnished to The Constitution by sightseers who followed the procession of eight or 10 automobiles containing the hooded men, received verification upon at least one point by Police Recorder John L. Cone, Police Lieutenant Harry Maddox and Radio Patrolman W. D. Nash.

This related to policemen's finding about 15 of the hooded band, in five automobiles, on Ellis street between Courtland street and Piedmont avenue, about 9 o'clock. Questioned by The Constitution, Cone, Maddox and Nash said they had come upon the group, while investigating a radio call to Courtland and Ellis streets, but had accepted the men's story that they were having "a little fun" and were just "staging a parade." The officers at that time had not heard of the kidnappings, due to a delay in broadcasting an alarm given police headquarters by The Constitution.

His delay was among the points to be probed by Burnett and his men.

Hornby Given Numbers. License tag numbers of various cars, furnished to Hornby by The Constitution—obtained from members of the sight-seeing party and from witnesses to the Broad-Alabama kidnapping, which left a court martial was instituted against the men, were checked by the detectives.

All the locations were to be viewed. These, in addition to the two principal business-district snatches, were:

Whitehall street south of Trinity avenue.

Forrest avenue, near Boulevard. Boulevard, north of Forrest avenue.

Stewart avenue, several blocks east of Whitehall street.

MAYOR TO DEMAND CAB SERVICE QUIZ

Resolution Will Order Company To Show Cause Following Complaints.

Mayor Hartsfield will present a resolution in council today asking the taxicab company to show cause why service should not be improved, and Councilman John H. White will introduce a resolution asking for larger and more comfortable buses on the Piedmont-Ansley Park and Sylvan Hills lines.

The mayor said he will ask that numerous complaints received concerning the taxicab service be answered by an immediate council investigation at which the cab company would be given a chance to state its case.

White will also introduce resolutions calling for one board for all of the city's charitable hospitals, one board for the health service, one board for planning and zoning, and a single board for parks and recreation.

The addition of employees to the Parks Department, the Cyclorama and the Weights and Measures Department are scheduled for consideration today. A proposed ordinance, indorsed by police, to require all occupants of a car involved in an accident to remain at the scene, will be placed before council.

Prescription for Reducing: Shake Well, Laugh Hard

EVANSTON, Ill., Feb. 5.—(AP)—A slapstick-loving sociologist today prescribed laughter for a bulging waistline.

Contrary to the familiar "laugh and grow fat," Dr. Arthur J. Todd, of Northwestern University, said laughter meant play, and that play, especially the kind that's not self-conscious, was the most effective way of checking ventral expansion.

Lion Quintuplets Born! Are Named for Dionnes

ROCHESTER, Ind., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Wild Animal Trainer Clyde Beatty revealed here today birth of lion quintuplets.

He said a lion litter rarely exceeded two and characterized birth of the quint to a pair of his jungle beasts as being as unusual as that of the Dionne quintuplets.

The five cubs, named the cub all females, after the Dionne children—Cecile, Yvonne, Marie, Annette and Emilie.

Then fate cast its die. A few months later, Carter was the center of a two-million-dollar and 10-million-word scandal.

And Then Fate . . . His successor at Savannah reported evidence of fraud in connection with contracts Carter had left.

A court martial was instituted in 1898. Its verdict swept the army's outstanding engineer from the court of St. James to a cell in Leavenworth prison.

The sentence read: "Accused to be dismissed from the service of the United States, to suffer a fine of $5,000, to be confined at hard labor for five years; and the crime, punishment, name and place of abode of the accused to be published in and about the station and in the state from which the accused came, or where he usually resides."

Carter served his sentence. Since then, his life has been a struggle for vindication.

In all, hundreds of persons saw the events, and they were reported without delay to the editorial offices of The Constitution, which in turn communicated them to police headquarters. Five street employees of The Constitution rushed to the offices immediately upon seeing the first kidnapping—a half-block away—and told what had happened.

Theater Denies "Stunt." Officials of the Fox theater, which will have a midnight showing Saturday of "The Birth of a Nation," a Ku Klux Klan motion picture, declared last night the raids could not have had any relation to it.

"We know nothing of any 'stunt,'" it was declared. "No responsible theater would consider staging such a thing for publicity purposes."

Recorder John L. Cone, Police Lieutenant Harry Maddox and four policemen, including Mayor Hartsfield's chauffeur, J. M. Wynn, encountered a group of the hooded and masked figures—estimated to number 15—on Ellis street between Courtland street and Piedmont avenue about 9 o'clock, but paused only long enough to exchange a few words with the men.

Cone, Maddox and Radio Patrolman W. D. Nash, another of the officers, explained to The Constitution yesterday that they thought "nothing of it" and stayed but a little while. "Cone, who was reported to have spoken to two or three of the group, declared ful chapter in the long and bitter feud between the New Deal and the nation's utilities.

"The agreement means, in my opinion, that within the next five years electric rates comparable to the TVA yardstick rates will be put in force by the utilities themselves in most of the country," he said.

"It's a wise and sensible compromise. Now, for the first time, the TVA will be permitted to carry on our public duties in a whole-some atmosphere of peace and constructive effort."

The transfer of more than $78,000,000 worth of dams and electric lines to TVA and other public bodies marks the end of five years of constant warfare against the TVA.

He explained that although TVA has taken over C. & S. properties involving approximately $2,600,000 annually in city, county, state and federal taxes, this money will not be lost to the various governmental subdivisions.

"Under our contract," he continued, "the communities agree to pay to the normal tax channels an amount equivalent to the taxes, and such payments were included in calculating local yardstick rates."

Of the TVA program, the vice chairman emphasized that laboratory research aimed at finding ways to increase income of the south through utilizing its natural resources was "far more important than power distribution."

Lilienthal, who is recuperating from a recent attack of pneumonia, left Atlanta at 10:30 o'clock, at Union station. He then took a taxicab to Terminal station, where the train continued Florida-ward about half an hour later.

He willingly posed for newspaper and newsreel cameramen in a corner of the dining room at Terminal station. He was dressed in a light hat, light suit, and light overcoat, with a vivid tie for contrast.

definitely yesterday he did not recognize any of them. This encounter checked, in point of time, location and personnel, with information supplied to The Constitution by a party of sightseers who trailed the marauders in their rounds, and who said they followed the hooded men—after the meeting with police—to further kidnappings on Forrest avenue, near Boulevard; on Boulevard north of Forrest avenue, and on Stewart avenue several blocks east of Whitehall street.

When questioned concerning his meeting the hooded band on Ellis street, Recorder Cone told The Constitution:

"I was cruising around with Lieutenant Maddox, which Blackwell and Jimmy Wynn. We picked up a radio signal to Car No. 13 to go to Courtland and Ellis streets where there was some sort of disorder. We were in the neighborhood so we went there, too."

"No Disturbance." "There was no disturbance on the corner, but in front of a dairy on Ellis, about in the middle of the block between Piedmont and Courtland, there were a number of cars parked and about 12 or 15 men in robes and masks standing at the rear of the cars, and saw that Radio Officers Nash and Beatty, of Car 13, were talking to the men. Nash shook his head at us, as to say everything was all right."

"However, I called out: 'What's the trouble and one or two of the men came over to the car, wearing masks and hoods.'"

"We're just staging a little parade," one of them said. We thought no more about it and drove on off. Maddox took me home."

Cone was asked by The Constitution: "Isn't it against the law to wear masks and hoods at night?"

"That's a matter for the police," he replied. "I have no jurisdiction over the police."

"Could Be Sure." "As a matter of information, isn't it against the law to wear hoods and masks?"

"I think it is—I wouldn't be sure."

"How do you feel about this mask wearing?"

"Personally, I think it's a pretty bad thing, but you know I'm not going around here and doing any snooping."

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 6, 1939.

HOAX OR REALITY—AN OUTRAGE!

Hooded hoodlums Saturday night robbed Atlanta of her good name.

Regardless of whether the mysterious "kidnapings" were part of a gigantic hoax or whether they were real, the fact remains that hooded men appeared in the city; were witnessed by many people as they seized men on the streets and put them into cars and drove away with them.

The important factor is that in some instances police were near at hand and took no action toward stopping the hoodlums in their hoax or in their depredations, whatever they might have been. It is of very grave concern to the people of Atlanta that the police officers adopt so apathetic an attitude; that one officer was quoted as saying to reporters that the hooded figures "got the right man" and that he knew they "wouldn't hurt him." The masked men were of more danger to the city than masked robbers. Would the officer, if he had encountered robbers leaving a building, have made an attempt to halt them?

Police are inclined to view it as a "publicity stunt." So it was—no matter what the outcome. It was the most vicious publicity the city of Atlanta has had in a decade. It matters not whether the Klan was responsible. It is not important that late Sunday afternoon there had been no reports of missing people. What is important is that masked and robed men could appear in various downtown sections and take men from the streets into the waiting automobiles. It is not important whether the men went willingly as part of a plot or were taken by force. What must make the citizen pause and reflect is that the police treated such events with nonchalance. Young people in cars followed the cavalcade of some of the hooded figures into Grant park. No police car took up the trail.

It is less a time for talking and writing than it is for vigorous action by the people of the city to see that police duty is performed. It will be interesting to see what action is taken with regard to the officer who told reporters the hooded figures "got the right man."

Meanwhile Atlanta and the south has suffered from an outrageous occurrence; one which delivers the south into the hands of her critics. Once more the moron and the hoodlum have been permitted to have their way.

It was indeed, as far as Atlanta and the south is concerned, a most vicious "stunt" as many yawning police officers termed it.

THE INDIAN TODAY

Very few people these days have reason to give thought to the descendants of the red man. Most people are inclined to the belief, if they think about the matter at all, that the Indian has been "Americanized" and absorbed in the modern life-stream. Such is not the case. In fact, it was only by a reversal of the policy of absorption that the Indian was saved from extinction.

Prior to the passage of the Indian Reorganization Act of 1934, years of effort had been devoted to making the red man like other men. He was made an individual property owner by the government, thereby destroying his natural tribal inclinations. When he didn't succeed in living the kind of life mapped out for him by the "white fathers" in Washington, he was dispossessed of his land by foreclosure.

But a new opportunity has been given him by the development of three principles of administration: Self-government, conservation of land and resources and credit. The purpose was to re-establish and stimulate tribal life and community of interest, the only mode of living under which the Indian thrives and lives happily. On practically every reservation in the nation hope for the future has been substituted for the despair of the past.

Under the individual scheme of life, enterprise had grown dormant. There was a lack of tools. There was no credit. Land was being ruined by unscientific methods of cultivation. Many tribes lived on the verge of starvation. Since the right to live as he was best suited to live has been restored; since he has been given sufficient credit and farm tools; since he has been taught how to conserve his land and timber resources, his holdings of land have increased by 2,780,000 acres within four years.

In the past the Indian mortality rate was double that of the general population. The death rate is now decreasing through efforts to control tuberculosis and other diseases. The old tendency to break up families has been abandoned. Larger and more expansive day schools have been opened on the reservations, thereby reuniting thousands of families which were separated under the old "boarding school" plan.

The new "bill of rights" has given the Indian a marked degree of self-government and control over his own resources. Over two-thirds of the 337,000 in the United States and Alaska now live, following a vote of the tribes, under the protection of the act. The original American has been a long time coming into his own, finding a place to live and enjoy life as best suited to his temperament and inclinations. Nobody will be heard to regret it.

JAPAN'S SIDE OF THE OPEN DOOR

The open door in China, from the Japanese side, has, of course, been misunderstood, as usual, on this side of the Pacific. Closing the door to occidental trade, the Japanese maintain, will increase the volume of that trade, because China will develop much more rapidly under Japanese management than if run by Chinamen. As proof of the contention, the rising sun propagandists cite statistical information based on trade history since Japan brought independence to Manchuria.

"In 1932," to quote from the ballyhoo department of the Japanese government, "Manchukuo's imports from the United States were valued at 20,000,000 yen. This represented 5.9 per cent of the total imports. In 1937, imports were valued at 58,000,000 yen. This represented 6.5 per cent of the total. Imports from other countries (with the exception of Japan), followed a similar course. During the same period, imports from Japan jumped from 182,000,000 yen, 54.1 per cent, to 627,000,000 yen, or 70.6 per cent of the total."

Seemingly then, Japan's conception of an open door in China would permit them to squeeze through with 70 per cent of all China's import trade, while charitably leaving 30 per cent to be divided among the remaining nations of the world.

This viewpoint, however, need not be misunderstood east of the Pacific. The truth of the matter is Japan is so hard pressed for the wherewithal to carry out her over-ambitious plan to create an "empire" that policies akin to confiscation must be resorted to, even at the risk of jeopardizing their relations with friendly foreign powers, lest the nation suffer a complete financial collapse.

The "incidents" in China have tripled the national debt within eight years. Although the per capita burden is lighter, on the whole, than in most western nations, it is proving to be a staggering burden to a people most of whom are living below the American slum standard. This is aggravated by a persistent decline in foreign trade. During the first 10 months of 1938 exports to all nations, not including China and Manchukuo, declined approximately 800,000,000 yen—about 40 per cent less than a similar period in 1937.

Without doubt the western powers have often dealt inequitably with China. It was only a matter of time when the preferred status, acquired, in some instances, under questionable circumstances, would have to have gone through a readjustment. But a wholesale grabbing of these so-called rights by Japan will, in the long run, be of little value to the Chinese people in their desire to become a unified, self-sustaining nation. For this reason, not to mention the treaty rights of other countries, the "open door" in China should be kept open.

BRITAIN VIEWS ROOSEVELT

Some interesting questions were posed last week in the announcement of results of the British Institute of Public Opinion, which parallels the Gallup survey in this country, examination of the Roosevelt third term attitude. Generally speaking, there is little divergence of opinion on questions that are of mutual interest, yet on this one subject there is a wide variation in the tabulations.

The British Institute asked whether it was the opinion of those queried that the "world would benefit if Roosevelt were re-elected." Ninety-one per cent said they believed it would. In this country, opinion is sharply opposed to a third term for the President, not only for Mr. Roosevelt, but for any chief executive. But in England there is a tradition of continuity in government. To an Englishman the King is the head of the government, and it is difficult for him to accept, as Americans have, the concept of change. In England, prime ministers may be replaced without deep effect on the operation of that government, or the attitude of the people toward government. For the King remains, and he is, in the final analysis, the head of the state to the English mind, even though his powers are strictly circumscribed.

There is, too, no familiarity with the strength of the tradition that a President should not serve a third term. Whatever the popular strength of a chief executive, there is and will remain a section of voting weight automatically thrown against a man who would violate the unwritten law. This, of course, had no effect whatsoever on the English vote. It is interesting to conjecture over the change which would be reflected in the American vote were it not for this injunction, first voiced by President Washington.

YOUTH AND THRIFT

(From The Greenville Piedmont.)

A father and mother of considerable means went to Europe recently. Before leaving home they presented to their two boys in prep school a kit for shining shoes.

It was the father's idea. He wanted them to learn the importance of saving dimes by shining their own shoes.

But on his return he found that they had gone him one better. The boys had been shining shoes for other students and teachers—making dimes as well as saving them.

It is unfortunate that this sort of intelligence is so rare among urban parents.

Most boys and girls of middle and upper class city families never find out anything about thrift and money-making until they have left home and gone out on their own. Then it becomes hard.

No wonder they resent paying the price of achievement, look for easy short cuts, blame society because they can't have all the things they want.

Money allowances should be given children only for the performance of certain duties, never as a matter of course, says George Sylvester Viereck.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

FISCAL AGENCIES IN FEUD WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—A few days ago, Senator Carter Glass had callers whose conflicting purposes must have amused him. The first to come was Chairman William O. Douglas, of the Securities and Exchange Commission. At the suggestion of Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., the senator and the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission discussed the problem of bank holding companies.

Little known in the east, holding companies are almost as powerful in the banking business in the midwest and west as they are in the utilities business everywhere. When the President suggested a year ago that they should be tackled, they were about the last financial stronghold unbesieged by the administration. At that time, Glass introduced a bill forbidding their extension. No action was taken, and now he is ready with another, even stronger measure.

A tough-talking fellow, with small love for the holding company system in any enterprise, Douglas is now engaged in a legal battle with Amadeo Pietro Giannini, greatest of the holding company bankers. He explained the Giannini case to Glass. Then, recalling his experience with utilities holding companies, he urged that the bank holding company bill should contain a death sentence clause.

A little later, John K. McKee and Ronald Ransom, important members of the Federal Reserve Board, also made pilgrimage to the Glass sanctum. Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Reserve Board, was once a holding company banker himself, and the board's senior postmaster is rather different from the one who presides elsewhere in the government. McKee and Ransom are reported to have pleaded with Glass not to introduce his bank holding company bill at all, warning him that, if he did so, "crackpot" amendments would be tacked on it by congressional merchants of monetary snake oil. As Glass energetically detests Chairman Eccles, it is doubtful whether he was persuaded by the Eccles emissaries. But he accorded them a polite hearing.

THE GREAT QUARREL Although the story of the Glass call is actually may seem trivial, it is actually the storm warning of another outbreak of the warfare between the Treasury, the SEC and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation on one side, and the Reserve Board on the other. The feeling between the two agencies is bitter, but purely personal. Adviser Thomas G. Corcoran is very bitter, but short-lived. Both look like pretty small potatoes beside the feud among the New Deal fiscal agencies, which is rapidly assuming the character of a seven years' war.

The last previous battle was over the SEC's determination to invade the domain of the Federal Reserve Board, which is the America Corporation. So public was Eccles' support of Giannini that it was feared the holding company banker would use the disagreement among agencies as a point in his argument. In order to give the look of a united front, the SEC actually asked Attorney General Frank Murphy to send his subordinate, Thurman Arnold, to tell the court that the Justice Department stood behind the SEC action.

DEATH SENTENCE The trouble between the Reserve Board and the SEC goes back to old jurisdictional disputes concerning stock margin requirements. The trouble between the Reserve Board and the Treasury and FDIC, while no more bitter, is of a more fundamental nature. Both Treasury and FDIC officials suspect Chairman Eccles of a desire to raid their power and bank systems.

The warfare is more sanguine than even now that the Treasury and FDIC suspicion has been pretty well confirmed in the Reserve Board annual report. In it, Eccles recommended the co-ordination of banking regulation and credit controls, as predicted in this space. The Treasury and FDIC are all for co-ordination, so long as the co-ordinator is not named Marriner Eccles. They will oppose in earnest in his power with all the strength they have.

Carter Glass is in a bitter public dispute with the White House over appointments, but he has been working with his close cronies, Chairman Leo T. Crowley, of the FDIC, on banking legislation. With the FDIC, Treasury and SEC supporting the senator, it's a pretty good guess that the bill will pass. And if the reports of its severity are correct, it will amount to a death sentence on bank holding companies, even though it does not specifically contain one. SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Many a man has dreamed in vain Of happy castles built in Spain, Perhaps 'tis well We cannot dream of death rain. Where armies scatter lethal rain.

Just A Dream.

Perhaps it was the result of all the stories we have read in recent years about horrors of modern warfare. Aided and abetted, undoubtedly, by the cheese andwich eaten shortly before bedtime. But here is the dream that came during the hours of sleep: Without warning a strange airplane appeared over Atlanta. Standing in the window of my office, it could plainly be seen circling and swooping over the city. It was incredibly fast. Then something was seen to fall, to burst in the street. Not loud, there wasn't any rending explosion. Just as though a container had broken. And a cloud of dirty yellow gas came from the place where it fell and spread, fast, in all directions. And wherever that cloud engulfed a living thing, that thing died, quickly and in agony. For some reason, unexplained as in dreams, there was a gas mask on my desk. I put it on and descended to the street, into the cloud of billowing fumes. And found the mask protected me. And I walked among hundreds of dead people. Saw nothing alive.

That City Fireman.

At last, however, I met another masked man, walking. He was a city fireman and the mask he wore was the kind kept for these men to wear in smoke-filled buildings. Fastened to his back was a portable oxygen tank. For some reason, I followed him and led me to fire headquarters. Other firemen lay around, dead. Evidently they hadn't found time to put on the masks. And my companion found another oxygen tank and a new mask for me. So then we went out onto the streets, all silent and filled with dead people and we decided to try to get out of the city and started toward Decatur and the new Buford highway, on the theory that if we went north we'd get to higher altitudes and perhaps climb above the deadly gas. The streets were filled with broken automobiles and wrecked street cars, smashed when their operators had died without time to halt the vehicles. But we found a parked automobile in good condition and, lacking an ignition key, my companion manipulated the wires under the hood and the car started.

We found it hard to get through the tangled wreckage on the streets and several times had to turn around and go by another street, when one would be completely blocked. And then I did something to the automobile so that, after a little while, it wouldn't run. But we just abandoned it, found another, and used that until it, too, stopped and would go no further. And so on.

Seeking Living People.

Once we passed a tall office building and saw living people, waving and shouting from the windows of the top floor. They had escaped the gas because it hadn't risen that high. But we went on and left them. For my companion pointed out that we didn't get them out of there alive, without gas masks, anyway. And that they'd probably kill us for our masks, if we went within reach. And there wouldn't be any food for anyone, up there. So we just left them to their fate. The residents of the area were continuously sounded the automobile horn, wondering if some one, miraculously saved, might hear us and shout from one of the houses. But no one did. It was all terribly still and silent and dead.

At last we got out of town, onto the highway and traveled away from the city until, after many miles, we found ourselves altogether away from the death gas, able to take off our masks and breathe the naturally once more.

The first farm house we came to a man came running out to ask what had happened. We told him and added advice that he'd better get away from there, as fast as he could. Because, with none able to enter the city to tend to the dead, it wouldn't be pleasant or safe, for many miles around, in a day or two, when decay and pestilence began to spread.

And so we rode on into the north. And that was the end of the dream.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, February 6, 1914:

"Chicago, February 5.—A man who habitually sets his alarm clock for 2 a. m. hour makes his wife get out of bed and sleep on the floor is guilty of disorderly conduct. This ruling was given today by Municipal Judge Sullivan, who fined the offender $50 and costs."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Insufficient. NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—Granting Carter Glass all the fine qualities that his friends and neighbors cited for him and, with the same polite acknowledgment to Senator Byrd, the rejection of a nominee for the federal district court on the mere ground that his nomination was personally offensive and obnoxious to them seems equally offensive and obnoxious to justice. The senate judiciary committee turned back Floyd H. Roberts, proposed by President Roosevelt, out of respect for the prerogatives and objections of the two Virginia senators, and there is no doubt that the selection was political. Such appointments always are, but I am not going to get expert about that or high-strung about the merits of Mr. Roberts, of whom I know nothing.

The reasons given are insufficient. Even when supported by Senator Glass, charge that Roberts joined a conspiracy to discredit and dishonor the recommendation of Byrd and himself. Nothing was said about the ability, character and reputation of the nominee, and to men who blocky obnoxious seem to stand on the proposition that a good man may not become a federal judge if he is personally offensive and obnoxious to any two senators affected.

There are senators who would be fairly certain to find any decent citizen personally obnoxious and offensive. But the same process any man who had tried to discredit and dishonor a rogue in the senate would be disqualified for this noble public service, and any political slob who received the endorsement of such would be assisted, at least, if not put over by sponsorship which should condemn him.

Political. Of course, Mr. Roosevelt makes appointments in a spirit of political malice, and it is not necessarily true that anyone he selects or approves is the best man available for the job in question. He is a political man, in the spirit of the senators themselves, he might have waived merit and snubbed better men in order to strike a blow in a fight.

Nevertheless, in opposing Roberts, Senators Glass and Byrd gave reasons which, being honored by their colleagues, acknowledge political as the first consideration in the selection of judges, and thereby give approval to the principle of political reprisal by the President in such matters. If politics comes first with them, why may not the White House play politics first, too, and wouldn't politics have come first if he had respected their wishes?

More Serious Objections.

I lack further information beyond the fact that the President sent his name to the senate for confirmation, but it seems plain on his record that much more serious objections should be offered, and in the public belief, against confirmation of Gaston L. Porter as judge of one of the newly created districts of Louisiana. Mr. Roberts was "personally" offensive and obnoxious to Senators Glass and Byrd, but would they inform themselves on Mr. Porter's conduct as Huey P. Long's attorney general of Louisiana and resist with equal vigor the confirmation of a man who served a ruthless dictatorship which used the courts to whip its political opponents?

And, although he has no record as a federal judge as yet, is Porter acceptable to Frank Murphy, the new attorney general, at a time when he is making a general inquiry into the actions of men already serving on the federal bench?

GOOD MORNING

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

"Aunt," said a gentleman who had just learned that the youngest son of his cook had been appointed to a responsible position by a large manufacturer, "tell me how you have brought up your children so that each one of them has become a good and useful man?"

"Oh, honey," replied the good old negro mother, "that's nothing. I had no education, and I could only teach them three things—just three things I taught them: their prayers, their manners, and how to work."

Three things—just three things—but how vastly richer would the world be, if every mother had taught her children these three things—to pray, to be well-mannered, and how to work!

Which brings to mind the picture on a life insurance calendar which came to my desk the other day. It shows a young mother sitting before the fire with her knitting in her lap and the little girl sitting at her knee with her books—and underneath the picture this legend:

Character can't be bought; it is home-made!

"I quite agree," someone will be saying, "but pray tell me how parents are ever to find the time these hurrying days to bow in prayer with their children, to teach their children good manners, to teach their children how to work?"

Alas, that any of us should ask that question, but isn't it true that most of us who are parents will have to confess that it will be in our hearts to ask just that question? And then comes the flood of shame that we should ever ask anything, much less us away from the dearest possession God ever entrusted to men and women—precious personalities, made in His image, capable of learning how to pray, how to behave, how to work, if only those who know them best and love them most will take the time.

And let us ever remember that about the only way we can ever hope to grow in service to those whom God has entrusted to our care. The home ever remains the citadel of civilization. It is in the home that woman rises to nobler powers than the home that man can find his lasting joys.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

DIARY OF A HOOD WEAVER

(Monday Night—Gee, we had a fine time last night. There was an old lady over on the south side about whom there'd been some talk. She was kind of old so only eight of us went over. We asked her if she'd been selling liquor. When she said 'No' we all lit in and gave her a whipping. It was swell. She hollered real loud and fainted before we got through. We looked around and took a few things from the house. (Later) Gee, Joe just called up and said we got the wrong old lady. Oh, well, what's one mistake more or less? Maybe she needed it. I'll bet the next time she hears of our order she will be mighty careful. You ought to have heard her yell, dear diary, when we started whipping.

(Tuesday Morning)—Well, sir, last night we had another fine time. Along in the afternoon a woman came down to our place and told us about her husband. She said he had been mistreating her and she asked that we come out and give him a beating. He was a pretty good-sized man and so 12 of us went along. We knocked on the door and, when he came to the door, we grabbed him. Gee, he was scared. Why, I think six of us would have been enough. He was that scared. We took him out and the chief gave him a lecture. It was swell. The chief talked all about the sanctity of womanhood and the glory of home life. The chief hasn't any home life and three wives have left him. You've got to hand it to him, though, he can put it on pretty. He can sure talk. Well, sir, after we'd talked to him we asked him if he had anything to say. He said somebody had lied. His hands were tied so Bill stepped up and slapped him in the face. The fellow didn't say anything else. We tied him up and gave him the works. It was swell. He tried not to yell but after the old strap began to bite he screamed a bit. We gave him plenty and left him lying there on the ground. We warned him that if he reported us he'd have to see us again. It's a good thing we did it because today a fellow told us the woman was no good and just wanted her husband beat up to cover up her own doings. Well, it was quite a night.

(Wednesday Morning)—Last night we ran into a bit of trouble. There were just five of us sitting around headquarters with nothing to do. One of the boys spoke up and said there was a crippled man living over on the west side who had been bootlegging some liquor.

It was pretty dull, so we took a drink around and the five of us went after him. We started to pick up a couple of extra boys just when we reached the table and came out with a big gun. Imagine law-abiding citizens being threatened with a gun like that. It's no wonder the police need us to help them. We cleared out there but we are going to have the police catch that fellow. There is no use in any of us getting hurt. Next time we have a fellow like that we'll take enough men. I thought all along five of us wasn't enough.

(Thursday Morning)—Last night we had an initiation. We got six of the boys in. Three were officers. We like to get them in. We gave them the old talk about 100 per cent Americanism. It sounds good when the chief puts it on. We all stood around with our robes and masks on. It sounds better when you are wearing them. You feel brave as anything. After the initiation we heard the report on law and order. There are two women we heard about who are not as good as they ought to be. One night soon we are going over and give them a whipping. We've got to exalt morality, the chief says. The odd thing is one of these women is an old girl of his who gave him the gate. Still, I guess the chief is right. The real 100 per cent Americanism man has got to stamp out immorality and these Communists and Reds.

MORE DIARY

(Friday Morning)—We went after those women last night. The chief didn't do any talking because he didn't want his voice recognized. It was swell. They were so scared we didn't have any trouble even though there were two of them and just 10 of us. We beat them good and did they yell. We gave them 24 hours to clear out of town and I guess they will. We've got to protect the womanhood of our city. That's what our order stands for, law and order. After that we went to the crippled fellow's house. Ed looked in the window and decided the cripple was too near that same table. Some time when we have enough men we are going to whip him. He's violating the law. (Saturday Morning)—We put on a show last night. We grabbed some men and took them out and beat them. We scared them plenty. We were pretty scared for a while because some kids followed us. Then we all went in for the regular meeting. The chief made a talk about law violators and how it was our duty to put down crime and to exalt 100 per cent Americanism. He talked plenty about the newspapers. Those writers say we are cowards going around in masks and robes. I guess they don't know we are sworn to defend the law and womanhood. What we need to do is get more members. Two of the six we took in gave us bad checks. We had a fine meeting and all felt like brothers when the chief talked about our great character and our magnificent contribution to civilization and to mankind. Now and then I have to grin behind my mask at the chief. He sure can sling it.

(Sunday Morning)—We went out to a country church this morning. They didn't seem glad to see us but we marched in, wearing our robes and masks, and put a $5 bill on the collection plate. Then we marched out. We had some boys in the congregation so it was all right. There wasn't any need to be afraid. I had to laugh. The chief got that five-spot from the pockets of that man we beat. It's great to be a hood weaver and to exalt Americanism. I sure am proud of my membership.

Some Must Die in Quicksand Before Others Choose A Safer Route

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

Spaniards, what have you got out of your war? You began it with light hearts, as we makers have since the beginning. It was a six-week parade, harming nobody but a few wicked men who deserved punishment. You made the old mistake of thinking of your strength and the other side's weakness. You forgot that other men's hearts and minds are like yours. It may be that you served some larger purpose of God's, for you taught the new generation an old lesson. You taught the world that victory costs more than any possible gain is worth; that people terrorized by war's approach soon become indifferent to the hat of death; that bombing of civilians, so far from causing panic and quick surrender, serves rather to inspire hatred and a grim and lasting determination to have revenge; that war is neither more nor less terrible than it was in 1918; that destruction of property serves no purpose but to satisfy malice, since men at war value nothing but the tools they need to make war; that modern wars are not finished by means of battles, but by exhaustion; that war is no longer a crusade, but mass murder and mass suicide.

So much you have taught the world, but what profit have you got for yourselves? Your six-week parade became two and a half years of horror, privation, suffering and slaughter, and the end is not yet.

Your country was a fourth-rate power, and the home of poverty and ignorance, when you began; now it is bankrupt and ruined. Your capital and proud cities are piles of wreckage; your art treasures, proud heritage of a glorious past, are destroyed forever. One million of your people are dead; more than a million are maimed and crippled for life. Your streets will swarm with beggars for a generation. The hearts of your people are bitter with hatreds that never will die. You have thrown away your accumulated wealth; you have wasted over eleven millions of dollars; and in desperation you have bartered your resources, your future and your independence to repay those who helped you for a price. Is that what you planned? Is that what you fought for? What else have you gained for all your suffering?

The world pities you, but pity will not bring back the dead, to care for widows and orphans, nor heal the wounds of the maimed. There

CONGRESS

Would Lift Veil

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Senator Bridges, Republican, New Hampshire, who last Tuesday attended President Roosevelt's hotly-debated foreign affairs conference, tonight asserted "the things he told us were by no means the subject of his press release later."

Declaring that the "veil ought to be lifted," the senator said at a press conference that an aroused nation's demand to learn whether secret pacts had been effected with foreign powers would prove "the hottest thing in my experience."

Yes, in a decade in Washington, the President Friday, termed a published report quoting him as saying America's frontier was on the Rhine a "deliberate lie," and in outlining his foreign policy, said it called for "no entangling alliances."

Bridges, declaring he was "still asking that the President release us from the oath of secrecy" on what took place at the conference, said:

"Our people have a right to know whether they are being dragged down the road to war. I think the memory of the last war is still too keen; I didn't think the people want to get into the one which experts agree is coming."

In Other Camp

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Some senate sentiment for strong American support of other democratic nations developed today, foreshadowing intensification of the stormy controversy over foreign policy.

In contrast to the complete neutrality demands of several administration critics, Senator Logan, Democrat, Kentucky, an administration supporter, said he thought the four-point foreign policy announced by President Roosevelt did not "go far enough."

A policy of greater support for Britain and France in their efforts to rearm would meet his approval, the Kentucky senator said.

It appeared certain the convening of the senate tomorrow would touch off prolonged debate on foreign policy, the $22,000,000 national defense program and revision of the neutrality act.

Air Base

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Chairman Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, of the house naval affairs committee, said today he would recommend spending $12,000,000 for improvement of the naval air base at Hampton Roads, Virginia.

He said he believed development of present facilities should be pushed now to provide the navy with an adequate Atlantic base pending further consideration of sites for two other bases contemplated on the east coast.

"We've got to have an adequate base on the Atlantic coast," Vinson said, "and since we already have one started at Jacksonville, Fla., he referred back to the special naval board headed by Rear Admiral Arthur J. Heppburn for further study."

Reorganization

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—The administration has a sufficient strength in the house to enact a compromise version of the government reorganization program on which President Roosevelt sustained a major defeat last season, a secret poll by party leaders revealed tonight.

Last year a measure giving the President far-reaching powers to streamline government functions was passed by the senate but rejected by the house, 206 to 198. Seventy-seven Democrats joined with Republicans to shunt the measure back to committee, and it was among these congressmen that party leaders took soundings.

Their findings will be conveyed to Representative Cochran, Democrat, Missouri, head of the house committee on government reorganization. The house agreed last week to continue the committee, and it is expected to get to work as soon as Speaker Bankhead fills three vacancies.

The program will be started in the house by passage of a series of measures, all looking toward Mr. Roosevelt's objective of placing the government on a business basis.

Free Arms Trade

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Official papers of the state department, made public today, disclosed that the United States adopted a policy of free trade in implements of war during the administration of President Harding.

The documents, most of them hitherto unpublished, were released at a time when congress is engaged in controversy over the sale of American planes to France and Great Britain. They are contained in foreign relations volumes of the State Department for 1923 soon to be made public.

The then Secretary of War John W. Weeks laid down the United States' position in a letter to Secretary of State Charles Evans Hughes, now chief justice of the United States.

The letter said:

"The United States in time of war is dependent almost entirely upon private manufacture of munitions while other great powers maintain large enough government owned and subsidized plants to much more nearly meet their needs. Curtailment of private manufacture would therefore work directly to the disadvantage of the United States."

Moth Balls

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(P)—Dopey has received more fan mail than Snow White and the other six dwarfs put together.

This was one aspect of the "Snow White" situation observed today as studio officials surveyed the historic movie's career preparatory to putting it away in moth balls for a while.

"Snow White" was seen by 800,000 people during its eight-week run in New York; it ran 35 weeks in London, 21 weeks in Paris, and 16 weeks in Stockholm.

It played in 31 countries and was translated into 10 languages, with a different set of people talking for each language. Over 2,000,000 dolls and 16,500,000 "Snow White" drinking glasses were sold.

Millions of letters asked if any of the characters were real.

BUSINESS

'Too Much'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Senator Norris, Independent, Nebraska, often referred to as "the father of TVA," said tonight the $78,600,000 price agreed to by the Tennessee Valley Authority for Commonwealth and Southern Corporation electric properties was "too much."

"If they had bought the properties at that price before all the litigation it would have been all right," Norris said, "but I don't see why TVA should pay them a bonus for their meanness." He added he believed completion of the sale "means TVA is going ahead."

Meanwhile some leading New York executives predicted a major improvement in business as a result of the amicable settlement.

Economists, financial leaders, and big business heads for years, with greater and greater force, have argued that no substantial improvement in heavy industry in the United States would come unless and until the utilities resumed expansion programs.

The TVA settlement with Wendell L. Willkie was characterized by some utility executives as "capitulation" on the part of the administration.

Such "capitulation"—and the characterization is based not only on the amount, but on principles, accepted in the price jump—is likely to launch the long-pent-up utility spending programs, they hold.

On the basis of the 1936 election, this represents approximately 21,000,000 votes against a third term to 13,800,000 in favor.

In spite of the sentiment against a third term, public opinion is leaning away from Senator Holt's proposed resolution to put the senate on record against another Roosevelt term, the survey shows.

Republican voters in the present survey favor such a resolution by 3 to 1, but Democrats oppose it. For the country at large the survey vote is:

"Would you like to see the senate go on record against a third term for President Roosevelt?"

Yes 49%
No 51%

Less than half of the Democrats in the survey (47%) said they would like to have Roosevelt run again, while Republicans were almost unanimously opposed.

Insurance Probe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—A senate committee called on life insurance companies today to use more vigorously their "superior position" in railroad reorganizations to help halt "the notorious recurrence of American railroad failures."

The committee told the senate the insurance companies had a special responsibility to effectuate sound railroad reorganizations because of a huge financial stake in the carriers, which it said was an eighth of insurance assets.

The committee reported on the eye of an investigation by the monopoly committee into insurance company investments, their management and size, and their influence upon capital markets.

Hearings expected to last about two weeks, will begin tomorrow morning.

Glass Houses

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(UP)—President Roosevelt has indicated to Philippine High Commissioner Paul McNutt that he should resign if he intends to campaign actively for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The report gained circulation after McNutt planned to leave Manila, probably Wednesday, for the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was said, feels that the Democratic lead—PAUL MNUTT—should not now draw a political campaign while waving a $18,000 a year as high commissioner.

McNutt's candidacy raises the possibility of a split in the Democratic party, according to some observers. They point out that Mr. Roosevelt, who subscribes to a frequently enunciated credo of liberalism, hardly could afford to allow McNutt, a mild conservative, to remain on the federal pay roll while seeking an office for which the President himself may run again, or use his power to nominate a candidate who will carry the banner of liberalism.

Philippine officials would like to see McNutt retain his commission-ership to help them in their drive to obtain congressional approval of economic legislation. Filipinos generally accorded the handsome, white-haired Hoosier with having done an excellent job. In addition they say he has restored American prestige to a place of pre-eminence in the islands.

More Expansion

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(P)—E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company today reported consolidated net income for 1938 of $50,190,827 after charges composed of $88,031,943 in 1937.

Last year's earnings were equivalent to $3.79 a common share and the comparable 1937 figure was $7.29.

Operating revenues of company and subsidiaries, including sales to customers, were about $235,000,000, approximately 17 per cent less than in 1937.

The company expended $21,000,000 in 1938 for plant extension and betterment and Lamont du Pont, president, said proportionate expenditures for construction are contemplated for 1939.

SCIENCE

3 Gallons a Day

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 5.—(P)—For 10 years Julian Gough drank as much as three gallons of lemonade, milk, water or iced tea every day. He had to—a rare disease made him crave liquids, "anything that was wet and cold."

It wasn't till he fell down and broke his hip that doctors at Research hospital found out what was wrong with him.

Gough's thirst left him all tired out at the end of the day. A physician said he had a type of diabetes and gave him insulin.

When the prescription didn't work, the disease was re-diagnosed as appendicitis and various other things.

Gough was still thirsty all the time.

One day he slipped on a rug in his home and was brought to Research hospital. An X-ray showed a broken hip. It showed, too, that Gough's bones were sort of moth-eaten in appearance.

This led doctors to believe his system was not producing enough calcium to supply his bones. After looking up records they decided he was suffering from hyperparathyroidism, enlargement of the parathyroid glands, which lie next to the thyroid glands in the neck.

What caused it was a lack of vitamin "D" in Gough's diet. Lack of the vitamin made the glands work overtime, with the result that for a while too much calcium was produced. The calcium excess caused dehydration, or loss of moisture, and that made Gough's bones spongy.

Gough's terrific thirst was the result of dehydration.

The doctors changed his diet. He got better right away and in two months went home.

Pretty soon, though, the trouble came back. So he went back to the hospital for another operation.

...and now he's going around all, but his bones are sound again and he hardly ever lingers at a drinking fountain.

LABOR

AFL Warns Reds

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5.—(P)—American Federation of Labor leaders today backed the congressional probe of un-American and anti-labor activities and followed it up with a warning that the AFL teachers' union may be ousted "unless it cleans its house of Communists."

Two demands on congress were contained in resolutions adopted at the AFL executive council's winter meeting in Miami.

1—An adequate appropriation to carry on the Dies committee inquiry into un-American activities.

2—A new investigation of organized movements to promote anti-labor legislation by state and municipal referenda.

The possibility of a break with the leadership of the American Federation of Teachers over the issue of Communist activity in the locals was advanced by Matthew Woll, of New York, an AFL vice president and council member.

In a statement upholding the recent action of the New York City Central Trades and Labor Council in suspending two teachers' union locals "for subversive activities," Woll said:

"It is a growing belief in some quarters that the AFL may ultimately be required to disassociate itself from the American Federation of Teachers unless that body cleans its house of Communists."

POLITICS

3d Term Poll

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP.
American Institute of Public Opinion.
NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—The third-term barometer of the American Institute of Public Opinion continues to show a large majority of American voters opposed to a third term for President Roosevelt, as Senator Rush Holt, Democrat, of West Virginia, and other administration foes seek a senate resolution against another term for the President.

Although the survey obviously does not indicate how President two "worst" amendments which Walsh offered, were not authorized by the AFL convention.

"The whole Walsh bill is an outright attack on the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining embodied in the Wagner act," the News said. "It is essentially an employers' program for crippling and defeating the purposes of the act. AFL unionists are already demanding an explanation from their leaders as to how they came to sponsor such an anti-labor program."

Martin-Ford

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(UP)—Wyndham Mortimer, CIO vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America, said tonight that the UAW executive board will revoke the charters of locals which send delegates to what he described as a "rump" convention called by Homer Martin, no longer recognized by the Congress of Industrial Organizations as UAW president.

Martin called the convention to meet in Detroit March 4 after he had suspended 15 of the executive board's 24 members, an act which the CIO contends violated the UAW's constitutional provision that no member of the board may be suspended by the president while it is in session.

Mortimer charged that Martin had called the convention hurriedly to expedite the conclusion of a plot with the Ford Motor Company, by which he had been promised a verbal authorization agreement contingent upon his ability to take the UAW out of the CIO.

Officers of the Ford local of the UAW will back the charges before the National Labor Relations Board, Mortimer said.

"These Ford officials told the board," Mortimer said, "that John Gillespie, a Ford agent, had told Homer Martin that an agreement would be given him with Ford on condition that he withdraw from the CIO, and if he did so Ford would guarantee the check-off of his organization in organizing the Ford plants."

JUDICIARY

Judge Before Jury

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(P)—Circuit Court Judge Martin T. Manton wound up his judicial duties today preparatory to leaving the federal bench he has occupied for 23 years and appearing tomorrow before a federal grand jury investigating his extensive business affairs.

Manton's resignation, ordered effective tomorrow by President Roosevelt, was submitted after the jurist had been accused by District Attorney Dewey of accepting loans from litigants before his court.

Called also to face the grand jury in the Manton case was Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas, of Connecticut, whose departure late Friday on an annual South American vacation course occurred just minutes before the resignation of States Attorney Gregory F. Noonan attempted to serve a hastily issued subpoena.

Noonan said also Thomas was wanted for questioning in the McKesson & Robbins case.

In a radiogram yesterday from the Justice Department, Judge Thomas said he had "no notice, no knowledge about the subpoena" and expressed willingness to return from Cristobal, Canal Zone, on the first ship available.

Assistant United States Attorney General Brien McMahon wireless-ly from Miami, Fla., today insisted upon the jurist's "immediate return."

RELIGION

Fear U. S. Law

FORT WORTH, Tex., Feb. 5.—(P)—Opposition of the Southern Baptist convention to the proposal to include salaried church officials and employees in the benefits of the Social Security act was announced today in a statement by Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president.

The proposed amendment was described in the statement as "a threat to the bill of rights and Baptist consciences."

Friends of the church were called on by Dr. Scarborough to register their opposition to the amendment by writing their congressmen and senators, as well as members of the committees which are to consider it.

Ultimate destruction of the relief and annuity organizations now maintained by churches is seen by the Baptist leader as one result of adoption of the amendment. The organizations now have a capitalization of about $200,000,000, he said.

Bingo

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 5.—(P)—Morris County Prosecutor Andrew J. Duch said today that the threatened closing of Catholic schools in Trenton would have "no effect at all" on his recently proclaimed ban on bingo games.

A group of Catholic clergymen petitioned the city board of education today to close the schools in their 1939-40 budget for educating 7,500 parochial school pupils. Counsel for the group, Frank J. Casey, told the board in a letter that the several parochial schools might not reopen next September "due to lack of finances."

"The request is not definitely linked to the bingo situation," Casey wrote, "but it is admitted that the ban on bingo has added materially to the extreme condition."

Man of the Week

Whether the frontier of the United States is in France, as it is claimed President Roosevelt placed it, but which claim he termed a "deliberate lie," or some indefinite spot in the Atlantic ocean the problem of defending it with battleships and naval armaments will rest to a large extent upon Carl Vinson of Georgia. As chairman of the House Committee on Naval Affairs it will be Vinson's job to obtain the money and engineer legislative plans for the naval equipment necessary to defend the frontier no matter where Franklin D. Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the armed forces of the United States, may place it.

Man of the Week

"The most adroit political strategist in Capitol Hill."

That is a congress-wide naval expert's opinion of Representative Vinson, an estimate shared by Mr. Vinson's colleagues in the house where the Georgian has acquired the effective experience of 24 years' service.

Now dean of the state's congressional delegation, Representative Vinson came to Washington in 1917 at the age of 29, the youngest member at that time. For the past eight years he has been chairman of naval affairs, one of the four or five major committees of the house.

Long years of determined perseverance in mastering the intricacies of naval operations have earned him the reputation of being the best informed naval expert in either branch of congress, despite the fact there is not a river or stream in his inland district capable of accommodating a first-class cruiser, much less a battleship.

So well, in fact, he has handled his job that he has never been defeated on any major bill affecting naval activities.

The scope of navy legislation adopted under his chairmanship has been tremendous, amounting all to upwards of $5,000,000,000—the greatest in the peace-time history of the nation.

It was Commander I. C. Bogart who has been assigned to the Vinson committee by the navy department during the past years who characterized him as the most adroit strategist.

A personal incident illustrates his effectiveness. A few years ago a conflict developed between the Vinson committee and the naval appropriations subcommittee.

Every time the appropriations subcommittee chairman would obtain a commitment from his committee to reduce the Vinson estimates the Georgian would go behind his back and reverse him. After this had been repeated several times the subcommittee chairman finally summoned his group in an executive session and there made them take an oath not to see, hear, or talk to Vinson until the bill was reported out. It was perhaps one of the most unusual tributes paid an adversary's parliamentary confidence in the annals of congress.

Since January 25, the Vinson committee has been holding hearings on the naval defense program for a total authorization of some $65,000,000.

A nation-wide flareup occurred last week over efforts of the Vinson committee to further defend our Pacific island possessions of Guam, on the ground it would unnecessarily offend Japan.

Because of his familiarity with every detail of the program, Mr. Vinson was able to quiet opposition over night.

Always an ardent believer in adequate national defense for our self-protection, Mr. Vinson has stuck to his guns over these many years, even in the face of much criticism at times from over-excited pacifists and patriotic groups. He is not a militarist.

Occupying three spacious rooms in the old house office building, one of which adjoins his large and imposing committee room, Mr. Vinson seldom misses a day at the capitol unless ill or called away on official business. He is a quiet but effective worker and enjoys the confidence not only of his own state colleagues, but of the entire membership of the house—Democratic and Republican alike.

States' chances in any possible new world outbreak were being virtually sabotaged by wholesale export of scrap iron.

In an "open letter" to the public he said "the United States never has been and is not now independent in war materials."

The United States could not enter into or maintain a major war for the lack of a sufficient supply of scrap iron.

In stating that he "finally had become mad enough to reveal in just what dire straits this nation was in at the conclusion of the last war" Smith urged organizations and individuals to demand immediate congressional action in barring exports of "all metallic war material."

The elderly, gray-haired president of an engineering and industrial chemistry firm here said that "just before the Armistice the iron situation . . . became so alarming . . . that documents were prepared to commandeer all the iron and steel . . . for war purposes."

Anxiety became so great that transportation maps were devised tracing hourly movements of cars of scrap iron. . . . Our mills were, at the time of the Armistice, 12,000,000 tons behind on urgent war orders.

"Scrap iron . . . holds jointly with fuel oil and coal the secrets of our war or peace. . . . At the Armistice Germany, England and Japan were bare of iron. . . . The World War ended . . . because scrap iron failed."

Smith said since the Armistice scrap iron had been accumulated in the United States to a point of "security" but that 12,000,000 tons have been exported in the last five years—7,500,000 to Japan.

"Without America's scrap iron, . . . there would have been no Japanese-Chinese war and no bellicious European situation."

No Hours, No Pay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—William Andrews, 18-year-old son of Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer Andrews, was back at his father's home today.

Aides of Andrews said the boy, who left the University of Pennsylvania last Monday without informing authorities, read in a New York newspaper a plea from Paul Sifton, deputy, for him to get in touch with his father.

William then called his father on the telephone, they said, and joined him here this morning on his return from Pittsburgh.

Andrews' aides quoted the boy as saying he left school to "go out and get a job," never thinking his unexplained absence would cause alarm.

'Millions Hungry'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—(P)—Secretary Wallace said tonight malnutrition was widespread in America and "there is a growing feeling" the government should do something to correct it.

"Millions of American families do not have adequate diets, either in quantity or variety," Wallace said in a radio speech.

Waffles and Strawberry Jam at Angela's;
Kurt Deering and Alix Barton Again

FINAL INSTALLMENT.

He looked at her and his excited eyes were misty. Greeting her hand, he said, "Thanks. You're great, Tuck. I'm—I'm on my way, on my way—to her!"

He was gone in an instant. Her eyes followed his tall, hurrying figure. She smiled but her brown eyes had tears in them. Crying? She brushed the tears away. What nonsense to be crying! And she thought, "I brought them together. I thought my work was done when I came down here. Your work is never done. You are never too old or too finished—to serve."

Ten minutes later the black and silver car was humming along the highway. The sun had vanished and drops of rain spattered against the windshield. Kurt thought, "Suppose I'm too late. Suppose I've waited too long. Gina told Alix that he, that's why she said to tell you. Oh, but I can't be too late, Alix! You've got to wait for me! You've got to wait just a little longer, darling!"

He parked the car in the driveway outside Ivy House and ran up the steps and opened the door just as Bernice was coming downstairs.

"Why—Kurt! What brings you here? What's happened? You look..."

His eyes were looking everywhere for Alix. Darling where are you? I can't wait to see you to tell you, to touch you, and kiss you..."

He laughed. "You mean I look as if I jumped into these clothes? I did! You mean I look half crazy? I am! Where's Alix. Tell me where she is! I haven't time to hear a lecture. I've just heard one and I'll listen to yours later. But right now I want Alix. Where is she? I love her and I want to tell her..."

"You love her?" Bernice asked. His eyes pleaded. He laughed again. "Yes, I love her! But don't make me wait to explain to you, please. I want Alix! I want to tell her first!"

Her eyes were excited, too. "Kurt, Eddie just left here. He was looking for her, too, and he has a one-way ticket in his pocket to Chicago. He's on his way to her to get her final answer. Alix went out and told me she was going to lunch at Angela's. She's going to see him. He moved away."

"Kurt, what?" He moved away. "Haven't time to tell you. I've got to be there before Eddie!" She called after him, "Darling, hurry! hurry! It's you she wants!"

Nothing had changed at Angela's.

la's. But gray, cheerless, deserted as it was, it made you welcome, Alix thought. The red tablecloths had faded a little more since that March night when Kurt first brought her here. It was cool and damp. Not snow today, but September rain falling drearily and steadily. One of Angela's six sons sat at a near-by table drawing with crayons.

The bell that had clanged Alix's entrance had a melancholy tune. Another little boy with unruly black hair and eager dark eyes peered from the untidy kitchen. Then Angela, wearing a clean gingham dress, came out and went to the corner table to Alix.

"Do you remember me, Angela? Waffles and strawberry jam? Kurt Deering and Alix Barton?"

In an excited and delightful mixture of Italian and English, Angela assured her that she had not forgotten, that she never forgot a face, and hurried to the kitchen to mix the waffles.

Alix, wearing a blue dress and a blue turban, pulled off her black gloves and folded her hands. Do you remember... "Funny," she thought, "it's almost as if Kurt were here. He's so close. I remember our times here so clearly—the way he looked, the way he smiled, the things he said. I remember how I had to guard my eyes and my voice to keep him from knowing how much I cared."

But her dreams had not begun in this shabby little place. She had had them for as long as she could remember; but they had stopped painfully and suddenly when Gina said "Kurt and I are secretly married" that night when nothing had seemed to matter very much.

Alix did not see the black and silver car stop. But when the bell clanged its melancholy note again, she looked up and saw him. It must have been a very long time, she thought later, before either spoke. Alix saw that his eyes were intense and excited, and Kurt saw her red mouth tremble a little and her eyes kindle with a light she tried to guard against...

She thought, "Why have you come, Kurt? It was so much nicer to pretend. I was playing a little game of unreality. We'll be very cool and polite to each other and I'll ask about Gina and perhaps now you'll tell me that you are married. And perhaps I'll tell you, if you think to ask that I'm not going to marry Eddie. But I won't tell you that I'm not going to marry him or any one else because all I had to give I gave to you. There's nothing left to give to any other man no matter where I am this winter or any other winter. Let's get this over quickly."

He thought, "How lovely she is! She's here because I brought her here and we were together here. This place is dear to her."

Then he went to her and sat opposite her.

But he was different, Alix thought. Very unburned, yes. But he didn't look at her casually. He looked as if he had much to tell her but that he did not quite know how to say it yet.

She said, "Now it's my turn to say 'Hello, stranger,' to you."

I am doing very well, she thought. My voice is light and merely friendly. We'll have a pleasant luncheon together and we'll part again as we have so many times before and I'll go out to Ivy House and tell Eddie again that I can't marry him because Kurt would always be between us...

He reached for her small warm hands and held them tightly. "Alix, darling, look at me. And listen to me. Look at me the way... the way a man in love wants the girl he's in love with to look at him. I'm not married to Gina! She lied to you. And I don't love her. She's in Hollywood and that's enough about her."

"All this summer I've been living a stone's throw away from Tuck and didn't know it until this morning. All this summer I've been in love with you. But I didn't see you because you said you did not care and because I was afraid you'd think I'd come to you on the rebound after Gina. But this morning I saw Tuck who told me that... No, you tell me, Alix."

Tell me... "I love you. I love you, Kurt!" "I don't deserve it. I never earned it. Alix, my darling..."

Eddie parked his car beside the black and silver car and got out. Through the window on which the rain was beating he saw them. Their hands were clasped across the table, their lips were moving and smiling and their eyes saw only each other.

Eddie thought, "And all because he had a faster car. No. She would not have, anyway. She had her mind made up last night. And she was right."

Pulling the collar of his raincoat pulling his hat brim down, he looked at them again and then, taking a railroad ticket from his pocket, tore it into fine bits and threw them into the wet street. He wouldn't intrude and yet he wanted to say to Alix, "You were right. I don't want a wife who loves another man the way you love Kurt. I want to be head man in my wife's life. And now it's all set for you two."

Oh, there were a lot of girls in Chicago and his mother had not favored marriage when he mentioned it to her...

Kurt said, "I thought it was Eddie."

Smiling, Alix said, "It could never be Eddie. It was you all the time. What did Tuck say?"

"What didn't he say? She bawled me out, Alix, I said something about star dust in your eyes one night... Now your eyes look as they did that night."

"Because until now there hasn't been any star dust in them."

"I took it away."

"You put it back, Kurt..."

He looked her fingers tightly in his. "Tuck told me to hurry. Bernice told me to hurry. They'll be anxious. And all I want to do is sit here and look at you and love you and... be thankful. Do you want to wait a little longer before you marry me?"

"I've been waiting since March. I don't want to wait any longer."

"We'll go out to Ivy House and tell Bernice. She'll call Nancy, and Nancy will call Don and Tod. We'll send a car for Tuck. But we'll stop on the way out there and get a license and we'll call in a clergyman this afternoon and be married. We'll get a train to New York and a boat tomorrow... Are you ready, darling?"

Her voice was soft. "I'm ready. I'll always be ready to go anywhere with you, but we're forgetting that new law—we must wait three days."

"We can wait—now that you're mine."

In the black and silver car he took her in his arms and kissed her.

"Alix, do you remember?"

"I remember everything. The first time you kissed me..."

"A moment ago was the second time and another moment will be the third time. Darling, there are going to be so many you'll never be able to count them all..."

They had forgotten Angela, who was standing at the window looking at them, smiling broadly, unconsciously that one of her small sons was standing close beside her, smiling broadly, too.

When she saw him, she said, "I knew it all the time, Tony. Why were they worrying? You go back to your drawing."

"Aw, but you're still lookin' the black-eyed little boy sad."

She nodded. "I'm looking at two of my best customers. Tony, your mother tells fortunes—right!"

THE END.

"This'll keep you indoors! If your gang smells Mama's perfume on you, they'll call you a sissy!"

'When You Play Good Golf and Lose, It's Not So Bad'...Dot

They laughed, no fooling, when Ty Cobb broke into baseball at Augusta. Doc Wilder, now president of the South Atlantic league, and many other veteran baseball followers who were around at the time, will verify it.

The year was 1904. Ty Cobb could not hit. He fielded only moderately and sliding was an unknown art. The Cobb batting average for the 37 games in which he played was .237. He finished the season with Anniston.

Augusta owners rubbed their hands when the Detroit Tigers put $750 on the line for Cobb's services the following season. Santa Claus, visiting out of season, could not have pleased them more.

That was 1904, and part of 1905. And August 30, 1905, was a memorable day for the Georgia Peach and also baseball, although there was no way of knowing it at the time. Cobb was in center field for Detroit. Jack Chesbro, a great spitball pitcher, was on the mound for the New York Yankees.

It was not dramatic then. But it is now. That is, what happened on Ty Cobb's initial appearance at bat. There were two out with Matty McIntyre and Chris Lindsay on bases. Cobb's smashing double scored them both.

That marked the beginning of baseball's greatest career. There is no hope any more of any player coming close to the records established thereafter by the matchless Cobb—the Georgia Peach who was born on a plantation near Mt. Airy.

The years have mellowed Cobb. They have grayed and thinned his hair, added pounds to his waistline and brought on a kindly attitude toward his fellow men. He is what you might call a country squire out in Glendale, Cal., a prosperous, sport-loving middle-aged fellow who still likes to win but can stand to lose—if it isn't more than one hole in an 18-hole match with friends.

If he lives to be 100 years old, he will still like to win. And, after all, there's nothing wrong in that. He did win. He has won in all lines now—financial and friendship—as well as baseball.

It is a long time, even as the crow flies, from August 30, 1905, to February 5, 1936, but there are constant requests for the baseball accomplishments of the Georgia Peach. They are worth studying. Baseball never will create a better story.

IT WAS A HARD ROAD.

Those who laughed stayed to cheer. Cobb traveled the hard road and never asked quarter. There were the long hours under the blazing sun practicing sliding until blood filtered through the uniform. And the other long hours of chasing flies until he got the art of fly chasing mastered.

A spectacular career followed his debut with Detroit. He batted only .240 in 41 games that season but he showed enough to let the fans know a star was born.

They still had the general idea the following season when he batted .320. And from then on the name of Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach, was a household word until 1928 when he finished his career as a member of the Philadelphia Athletics.

They say he was mean and maybe he was. But he stands alone as the fiery genius of the game. It did not pay him, in terms of the filthy lucre, what such accomplishments were worth to the game, but he was always a jump or two ahead of the opposition on the diamond and the same was true in the financial matters. He'll never worry about money.

It may be interesting to look at his batting average from 1907 through 1919, excluding only one year, 1916. There was nothing wrong with his average that year—he batted .371—but it so happened that Tris Speaker broke up a great consecutive streak of leading the American league for Cobb when he (Speaker) batted .386.

So here's the record of Cobb's for the 12 years he led the American league—1907, (.350); 1908, (.324); 1909, (.377); 1910, (.385); 1911, (.420); 1912, (.410); 1913, (.390); 1914, (.386); 1915, (.317); 1917, (.383); 1918, (.382), and 1919, (.384).

Cobb played 24 years of major league baseball and only once batted under .300. He has a lifetime batting average of .368. And yet he was not considered a natural hitter. Oh, well.

Of course, he did a lot more than just mash the potato, as they say down on Auburn avenue. He left a few other records of more than passing interest.

AS, FOR INSTANCE—

It seems that he played in the most games, a matter of 3,033. He went to bat the most times, something like 11,429. If figures bore you, remember I'm still talking about Ty Cobb, the Georgia Peach.

Cobb scored the most runs, 2,244. He batted in the most runs, 1,901. He made the most base hits, 4,191. Not bad for a fellow who wasn't a natural hitter. He led in base hits for eight years. He got five hits in one game four times in one season and 13 times during his career. He made the most long hits, 1,139. And speaking of total bases, his mark was 5,863, including 3,052 singles, 297 triples and 118 home runs. He led the American league six years in total bases. He made the most three-base hits, 297.

Which brings up the subject of base stealing. He didn't know how to slide in 1904 back with Augusta in the Sally league. When he had ended his career in 1928 and they checked up on the records, however, they found the Georgia Peach had pilfered 892 hassocks, to use the Scandinavian; had led the league 10 years in this department, and in one season, 1915, had stolen 96 bases in 156 games.

In that same season, he was caught stealing 38 times. Which gives one a faint idea of how often he was running. It is really a thrilling epoch of baseball—the never-to-be-forgotten career of the country boy from a small plantation near Mt. Airy, Ga.

Ty Cobb today does not know the exact location of the place where he was born. He moved with his family as a youngster to Royston. But he was not born there.

He was a man without a home town, a ball player without a friend. But that was years ago, comrades. Today there is no finer fellow, none more kindly disposed toward his fellow man. He played the hard way and achieved a new outlook on life in general the same way.

And no matter what they say, he will remain baseball's most colorful and glamorous figure. They never associated Ty Cobb with any scandals. He played to win. And, as mentioned earlier, there's nothing wrong in that.

They said truly of him that he had the look of the eagle and the soul of a thoroughbred.

PAT'S APPROACH SHOTS ARE BEST IN GAME—KIRBY

Says She Never Enjoyed Match More; Both Players at Best.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.

MIAMI BEACH, Feb. 5.—What a day, what a day! I have never played in such a golf match as Patty and I had today. We both shot very good golf and had a close time of it all the way. In the morning round I had a 78 and Pat took 79 and I was one down at the end of the 18th.

Patty has the best short game I have seen in a long time. She takes that niblick right off the edge of the green and knocks it right up to the hole. That happened so many times today I really got tired of looking at it. In the afternoon round we played very evenly until the last nine. It was there I began to slip. I missed a putt on the 15th green for a win and was 2 down and 3 to go. On the 16th I hit my second shot something terrible but put the next one on the green and sunk about a 30-foot putt to keep the match going.

On the 17th, which has a canal in front of it, I hit a long wood shot to try and get to the green but played it a little too much to the left and landed in the trees with an almost impossible shot to the green. Pat won the hole with a beautiful 4 and that was the match.

I have never enjoyed a round any more than I did that match for Patty is certainly a grand person to play with.

We both played the best golf that we have ever played on this course. When you play good golf and lose, it is not quite so bad.

Most of the golfers are going to Palm Beach from here for that tournament starts Monday. That won't give Patty and some of the others much rest. As for me, I expect to leave here Tuesday and I am going to try to get back for one or two later tournaments.

Tomorrow I hope to play another golf course here. Tonight I think I shall go out and have a fine time for I haven't had much chance to see Miami.

LOOMS AS STAR

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 5.—Heavier and more agile than he was last season, Co-Captain Tommie Edwards, senior center from Montgomery, is playing his best basketball for Auburn this year. And he will be ranked as an outstanding hardwood artist if he can turn in his ace performance consistently.

The veteran Boston Red Sox hurler is confident his salary whip is again in shape and he is looking forward to a good 1936 season. His pitching arm went "dead" last July 4 and stayed "dead" for five weeks in the middle of the season.

Despite that, Grove led the league with an earned run average of 3.07 and wound up with 14 victories against four defeats. Not a bad record for a pitcher who has been in action almost 20 years.

Lefty, stopping off here on his way to Hot Springs, Ark., for a couple weeks' of preliminary training, said he had eight doctors studying his baffling arm condition, which he described as having "no power in it."

"They neved did find out what was wrong with it," he said. "At least, if they did, they never told me."

The lanky left-hander said he didn't do any hard work this win-

Holdouts on West Coast Are Scarcer This Year

Tobin, Waner Brothers, Suhr Dissatisfied; DiMaggio Has Made No Comment on Contract.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Big league baseball holdouts around here are scarcer this year than last. Maybe it's the weather.

Some of the boys, however, have dug their toes in. For instance there is Jim Tobin, who wants more money for pitching for the Pittsburgh Pirates. He has returned four contracts already. The raise the club offered isn't big enough, he says.

Tobin has a few private allies too. The Waner brothers, Paul and Lloyd, are on the same side of the fence. So is his near neighbor, Gussie Suhr, who was offered a cut of $1,500 in salary. Suhr just sent back the second contract offered him. It was accompanied by a note reminding him he didn't have such a good season last year.

Joe (I Won't Talk) DiMaggio, who held out for $40,000 last season, settled for the original $25,000 offered and took a deduction of $1,850 for reporting 10 days late, has received his 1936 contract. That's about all anybody but Joe knows about it. He has insisted all along he will let the Yankees make any announcements concerning him this season.

Reports that he was negotiating with Prexy Ed Barrows for return of the $1,850 were denied (in no uncertain language, too) by his older brother, Tom, who usually acts in an advisory role.

The most unusual holdout case is offered by Joe Oringo, expected to become the regular shortstop for the St. Louis Cardinals this season. Oringo, a recent bridegroom who recently purchased a candy store here, hasn't even played a major league game yet but he knows what he wants in the way of a major league salary for trying. He's a Coast league graduate from the Cardinals' chain system Sacramento club, and can really play ball.

Monte Pearson, Yankee pitcher, returned his contract for the same old reason—more money. Stanley Hack and Augie Galan, Chicago Cubs third sacker and outfielder, respectively, are afflicted with a similar ailment. Galan was 218 now. He has given up smoking.

Although venturing the belief his arm should be as good as new this season, Grove wasn't predicting how many victories it would bring him.

"Never have in 20 years, and I don't intend to start now," he explained.

He did predict, however, that Cleveland and Boston "will be right up there battling the Yankees" this year.

He just "loafed and hunted" in South Carolina and Canada—and put on 16 pounds. He weighs

PEERLESS TRIPS WARREN, 48 TO 40

Sensational Norman Leads Tennessee Team From Behind To Win.

Warren blew a 17-6 lead yesterday afternoon at the arena and a fighting Peerless Mills team from Chattanooga, led by Norman, a sensational forward, who broke through for 20 points, came back to win a 48-40 decision. Three weeks ago Peerless defeated J. P. C. here in a close game.

Gene Warlick, star Warren guard, held Norman to a pair of field goals in the first half, but Gene fouled out almost as soon as the second half got underway and the elusive and skilled star of the Peerless attack completely befuddled the Warren defense, finishing the game with 20 points. His pivoting and faking was nothing short of amazing, and he wore out three guards who replaced Warlick.

Warren led at the half, 22-20, on the strength of some very fine shooting, but couldn't hold the pace after the intermission as the slick-ball-hawking visitors took the lead and held it.

Virlyn Moore sank 13 points for the Atlantics.

Warren Reserves won their 14th game in 14 starts, beating Piedmont Laundry, 45-37. Piedmont gave the Reserves their only loss of the season. Red Pittman, who belongs on the varsity, shot 20 of the Reserves points.

Substitutions: Warren-Johnson (4), Piedmont-Fischer, Spruill (5), Towery (10), 12.

Half-time score: Warren 22, Piedmont 20. Referee, Chambers; umpire, Bullock.

OPEN GOLF REVIVAL

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 5.—(AP)—The Chamber of Commerce announced Saturday a revival of big-time open golf tournaments for Asheville. A $5,000 Land of the Sky tournament will be held here April 7-9. Asheville has not had a large open tournament since 1924.

Dizzy and Paul Dean Have New Stepmother

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Baseball's famed Jerome (Dizzy) and Paul (Daffy) Dean have a new stepmother.

She is Mrs. Mattie Sandifer Dean, married to 65-year-old Albert M. Dean, the boys' father, in Rockwall, Texas, January 21. They met, the couple said, Saturday, January 20.

Terry Predicts Giants Will Finish One-Two

Giant Manager Says Potential Power Great; Sees Fine Year for Hubbell.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(UP)—Displaying a sweetness and frankness foreign to the gruff, glum manner usually ascribed to him, William Harold Terry declared Saturday the New York Giants were headed for the 1936 National league pennant.

"We have more potential power than we've had since I've been manager of the club," said Terry.

"If we don't win the pennant, the club that beats us out will finish one-two."

Starting his seventh full season as successor to John J. McGraw, Terry painted an optimistic picture of the Giants' strength and minimized the potentialities of the other clubs—that is, all except one.

LIKES REDS. "Of all the other clubs, I like Cincinnati the best," he said. "I don't like their combination around second and short and I think they're weak at third. That's what will probably beat them. But they certainly have the pitching. If Bordagaray can plug up the third base gap, and Whaley Moore blossoms out as the pitcher he looks like he should be then the Reds will be tough."

"I don't think any of the other clubs have strengthened. The Pirates haven't helped themselves any. They got a smart young catcher in Ray Mueller but they lost power in sending Al Todd away. I was surprised at the deal as I tried several times to get Todd and never got a nibble."

CUBS WEAKER. "The Cubs are weaker because Bartell isn't as good a shortstop as Jurgens. Billy Herman should have a better year but for the Cubs to be tough Hartnett will have to catch regularly and hit well. About Leiber, I don't know. I always thought he'd hit .350 every year for us and he never did. I think Demaree will make us a better man. He told me he was tickled to get away from Chicago because it was too tough to hit a curve ball in the Cubs' ballpark."

"I thought the Cardinals had a good ball club last year and they'll probably be better this year. Pitching is their big question mark. Shortstop also is a problem. However, they stand a good chance to crowd into the first division."

SECOND DIVISION. "Brooklyn is still a second division club. Boston hasn't helped itself much, if any. Their pitchers are too old. A fellow I'd like to have off the Bees is Vince DiMaggio. I'd make him choke up about six inches on his bat and

Bulldogs Pace S. E. College Teams

GEORGIA FIVE ASSUMES LEAD AS TIDE LOSES

'Gators in Fourth Spot; Jackets Drop to Sixth in Standings.

By KENNETH GREGORY, Associated Press Staff Writer.

The rapidly-changing scenes of the Southeastern conference basketball show found the Georgia Bulldogs in the pacesetter role today.

While the Bulldogs were rolling up a 43-21 record over the Auburn Plainsmen on their home court last night, Vanderbilt's Commodores made it possible for Georgia to assume full control of the race at this stage by staging a surprise 36-34 win over Alabama's Crimson Tide.

After heading the parade for nearly two weeks, Alabama dropped into third place following the setback suffered at the hands of Vanderbilt, which previously had been conquered by the Tide. Louisiana State's Tigers took three of four games from Mississippi State during the week and jumped into second place.

Georgia and Louisiana State each play single conference games this week, the Bulldogs meeting Auburn in a return engagement and the Tigers facing Georgia Tech. Alabama has a busy week in store. The Tide meets Mississippi twice and has single dates with Tennessee and Kentucky.

WILDCATS HIT STRIDE. The Kentucky Wildcats, after dropping their first two conference games, apparently hit the stride expected of the Blue Grass cagers by victories the past week. Kentucky defeated Vanderbilt handsily, 51-37, and followed this with a 37-31 win over a favored Marquette quintet.

Georgia's Bulldogs were impressive against Auburn. The team, composed of three sophomores and two juniors, is one up on accurate shooting and excellent defensive players. If the Bulldogs maintain their present pace, they will go into the annual tournament as one of the chief title contenders.

On the basis of results to date, it appeared the scramble for the crown in March will be one of the most wide-open in years. Georgia Tech won the title a year ago, but lost most of the players on that winning combination and cannot be rated as a contender.

TAKE 'EM THIRICE. Louisiana State lost a 29-31 decision to Mississippi State and trounced the Maroons thrice by scores of 48-32, 47-45 and 54-33. Georgia made it two over South Carolina by defeating the Gamecocks, 49-34. Georgia Tech also won from South Carolina, 29-25, and dropped an overtime 29-33 decision to Florida.

Tennessee, in fifth place and holding victories over Kentucky, Sewanee and Vanderbilt, did not play a conference game the past week but nosed out a strong Marshall College five, 42-41. Auburn dropped a 44-59 verdict to Mississippi College of the Dixie conference.

DALTON, Ga., Feb. 5.—The annual Whitfield county basketball tournament will be held in Dalton on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights of next week with six schools entering both boys' and girls' teams. Schools entering the tournament are: Westside, Tunnel Hill, Varnell Valley Point, Pleasant Grove and Dandville.

Opening-round games will be played Thursday night, with the semi-finals scheduled for Friday and the finals Saturday night. Westside girls, last year's champions, and Valley Point girls are the favorites in this year's tournament. The Varnell and Pleasant Grove boys have strong teams. Cohutta, last year's champions, did not enter the tournament, but will compete in the seventh district meet at Rome instead.

SWIMMING SITE

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 5.—(UP)—The Ohio State University natatorium will be the scene of the 1939 National Amateur Athletic Union swimming championship meet, Mike Peppe, coach of the Ohio State swimmers, announced Saturday night. Tentative dates are either March 31-April 1 or April 7-8.

ALTERNATE LEADERS

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 5.—Co-captains of Auburn's 1939 basketball squad, Center Tommie Edwards, Montgomery, and Forward Malvern Morgan, Lanett, alternate in leading the Tigers in their games. The Tigers' hardwood chiefs are both seniors.

Nelson, 15 Under Par, Albany Trials Sets 54-Hole Record TO OPEN TODAY ON ELLIS PLACE

Reading Pro's 130 for 36 Holes Is Also New Mark; Wins by 12 Strokes.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 5.—(UP)—Byron Nelson, stocky Reading, Pa., golfer, won the $3,000 Phoenix open tournament today with a brilliant 54-hole score of 198, 15 strokes under par, for a new Professional Golfers' Association record.

Nelson stroked his way around the course three times in the two days of play in 68-65-65. His work won him the $700 first prize.

He opened the day with an eagle-three on the 465-yard first hole. He went out in 33, three under par, and then came in with a 32, also three under. On the second round today he shot a 31 going out and a 34 coming in to clip another six strokes from the course par of 71.

Nelson had his only trouble on the 15th hole of the first round today, taking a four on a par three 175-yard hole.

Second place in the tournament went to Ben Hogan, White Plains, N. Y., who came in with a 210. He had rounds of 69 and 71 to close.

E. J. (Dutch) Harrison, Oak Park, Ill., was third with a score of 211 and Harry Bassler, Long Beach, Cal., fourth with 212.

Fred Corcoran, manager of PCA tournaments, said Nelson had shattered two records with his spectacular play. He set a new record of 130 for 36 holes in tournament play, with his 65's today, and also established the 54-hole record with the 198. Thomson and Horton Smith previously were tied for the 36-hole mark with 131.

Nelson said atmospheric conditions contributed to his low scores. "The air was so fine and the ball carried so well, I just couldn't go wrong, I guess," he said. "Any one should play a good game on a day like this."

Lieutenant Ken Rogers, stationed at Maxwell field, Montgomery, Ala., was amateur medalist with 74-75-74-223.

The steadiest shooting of the tournament, aside from Nelson's, was by Harrison, who had 71-70-70-211. Bassler came into fourth-place money with a 69 and 68 today, after scoring a 75 yesterday.

Harrison replaced Metz as the leading money-winner of the 1938 tourneys, receiving $350 for third place and boosting his total to $2,401. Metz earned $175 to bring his total for the season to $2,375.

N. FULTON PLAYS MARIST TUESDAY

Basketball will hold chief athletic interest at North Fulton this week with both boys' and girls' teams facing keen opposition. Tuesday night at 7:30 the North Fulton boys will seek to make it two straight over Louis Van Houten's Marist Cadets.

North Fulton defeated them earlier in the season by the basketball score of 11 to 8. North Fulton will be fresh from three victories chalked up last week over Newman, Druid Hills and Marietta.

In the girls' game, which will follow, keen competition will be at stake between North Fulton and Washington Seminary. The N. A. P. S. team defeated the North Fulton girls by a lone point only two weeks ago.

Friday night, North Fulton girls and boys will face what is expected to be stiff opposition from the Monroe High teams. Play will start at 7:30 o'clock.

CROSETTI DISAPPEARS. The Yankee shortstop, Frank Crosetti, is a genius at pulling disappearing acts during the off season. He lives in San Francisco, but no body would ever know it. It is assumed he will sign up as he seldom gives the club trouble this way.

Among those signed, sealed and ready for delivery are Dolph Camilli, Tony Lazzari and Harry Lavagetto, of Brooklyn; Joe Marty and Dick Bartell, of the Cubs; Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati catcher who led the National league in batting last season; Marvin Owens, of the White Sox; Eddie Joost, Cincinnati rookie infielder, and Sam Chapman, of the Athletics.

Bartell was sitting pretty with a two-year contract with the New York Giants. The Cubs had to assume it when they took their new shortstop in the biggest deal of the winter.

James Key Golfers Will Meet Tonight

James L. Key golfers will open Atlanta's municipal organization golf week at 7:30 o'clock tonight in an annual meeting at the club.

Officers will be elected, after which plans for sponsoring Key's team in the city municipal golf and the club's participation in the week's "booster program" will be planned.

It's the biggest week in the history of Atlanta's municipal golf and the first time that an attempt has been made to organize the players into an organization.

Officers of the Key club are George Clayton, president; Mortimer Freeman and Max Kessler, vice presidents; James Mitchell, secretary and treasurer, and Jack Skelton, assistant secretary.

Fox, Klem, McCarthy Are Honored

Baseball Writers Ride Players, Particularly Zeke Bonura.

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(UP)—The high spot of baseball's off-season game tonight at the Hotel Commodore when the New York chapter of the Baseball Writers' Association of America staged its 16th annual dinner and frolic at which were honored three of the game's outstanding figures, Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees; Bill Klem, veteran National league umpire, and Jimmy Fox, first baseman extraordinaire of the Boston Red Sox.

A throng of more than 1,000, including the leading figures of the game, attended. Among the principal speakers were Postmaster General James A. Farley, General Hugh S. Johnson, Mayor Fiorello La Guardia, Grover A. Whalen, Brother Gilbert, discoverer of Babe Ruth, and Walter O'Keefe, the comedian.

It was the first time an umpire ever had been honored by the baseball writers. He is the oldest umpire in the majors and long one of the most colorful figures in the game.

The awards to McCarthy, Klem and Fox formed the serious part of the program. The writers devoted the rest of the evening to taking apart the game's leading figures, paying particular attention to Larry MacPhail, Brooklyn's Houdini man, and Bill Terry, gentle boss of the Giants.

During their minstrel show Arthur Mann sang a song entitled, "I've Got a Pocketful of Schemes," dedicated to MacPhail, the man who gave the National league night baseball and New York radio broadcasting of games. In another skit one of the end men says:

"I have the most beautiful ball park in the world."

"Why shouldn't they have," answers another end man. "They spent $40,000 for seeds (Bob Seeds the outfielder)."

"I don't see why they should have done that," chirps another scribbler. "When ordinary fertilizer would have done as well."

MacPhail was dubbed "Thomas A. Edison MacPhail" in one song that told of his master-minding and experimenting in Brooklyn, which added that even he "says he can't go wrong."

The collapse of Pittsburgh in the 1938 National league pennant chase was described as the biggest Pirate collapse since they "shot the leg from under Long John Silver," and referring to Ford Frick's recent trip to Europe, the writers "got a pocketful of schemes."

Zeke Bonura, weak-fielding new first-sacker of the Giants, was the "Flat Floot Floogie With the Hey, Hey," and the National league, generally, was given a going over, which has been for the American league.

After it was pointed out that Frankie Frisch, deposed manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, was "getting along without the Deans," was pointed out that Phil Wrigley, Chicago Cubs' president, also got along without Dizzy last year.

"Only he did it the hard way," went the gag. "He paid $185,000 for the privilege."

Doc Prothro, new manager of the lowly Phils, has his "biggest cavity to fill" and another crack explained. "He has to pull the Phils out of last place," it was said of the former dentist.

Redlegs Extend Bill McKechnie's Contract 2 Years

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(UP)—The Cincinnati Reds announced today they had extended Manager Bill McKechnie's contract, which had one more year to run, through 1940 and 1941 National league seasons. It was a move unprecedented in Cincinnati baseball history.

McKechnie came to the Reds from the Boston Bees last year and raised the club from its cellar position of 1937 to fourth place. He received a salary of $25,000 plus a bonus of $5,000. The bonus was promised him if he either raised the club into the first division or equaled it with a 450,000 attendance mark of 1937.

He did both.

Bowling

Ed Walker won the handicap sweepstakes with a five-game count of 63 that gave him the top cash prize and title of the city's champion bowler. He hit the pins for powerful counts Saturday.

E. M. (Tony) Cheek placed runner-up with a four-game count of 52. T. L. Cerniglia was fourth with 616 as he tied L. E. Bradford, J. P. Burnett and J. W. Anderson.

W. L. Cerniglia was seventh with a score of 609, as 88 bowlers took part in the bowling in this novel pin meet.

Mrs. Tommie Carper won first place in the afternoon and the City Passenger Club, Georgia Ladies', Italian-American Club, Commercial and Sunday School leagues will be active on the downtown drives beginning at 7:30 o'clock this evening.

J. P. C. FIVE BEATS FUNGO-SOL, 50-19; BROWDY IS STAR

Coach Bennett Uses 11 Players; Progressives Plays Hogsaville.

By MELVIN PAZOL.

J. P. C. ran away from a Fungo-Sol quintet, almost tripling the score on their rivals to win, 50 to 19, here last night. Coach Harold Bennett used every substitute on the Progressive bench, employing 11 players, and still completely outclassed the North Georgia basketball team which held Warren to a 10-point victory last week.

The Progressives fired shots from all angles and distances from the basket, and it looked almost as if they could never miss. Nine J. P. C. members contributed to the scoring total.

Led by lanky Steve Browdy, center snailie who totaled 17 points, the Progressives were invincible. They probably could have defeated any team in the south the way they played last night. Little Hyman Katz, who was second high scorer with 11 points, was never better at stealing away for crisp shots, and the way Browdy pivoted around for criss to pile up his total was a thing of beauty.

Greenberg, star guard, was ill and only played a few minutes of the game.

An improvement in foul goal shooting was also noted. Only nine free throws were missed by the Progressive team. They made 12 of them. In recent games they have missed about two-thirds of their free throw attempts.

The J. P. C. Cubes won a return game from Dr. Marvin Sugarman's Strauses, 32 to 31. Besser, of the losers, was high point man with 10 points.

Wednesday night the Progressives got a chance to avenge the early season defeat handed them by Hogsaville. The United States Royal five beat J. P. C. 29 to 25, in the second game of the season, before Browdy and Minsk had returned to the Progressive squad.

J. P. C. should be the favorite this time.

Six Patrol Cars Chase Two Men In Vain; Bullets Splinter Window.

Bullets splintered the windshield and a window of a radio patrol car and narrowly missed Patrolmen H. A. Beatty and W. D. Nash when two negroes in a speeding car fired at the officers last night on Beil street, near Edgewood avenue. A running gun-fight followed, in which several shots were fired by police. The negroes escaped.

The officers reported they sighted the car, for which a lookout had been previously ordered by Radio Patrolman J. B. Bishop and T. J. Sykes, manning another patrol car. The two patrol cars met in the vicinity, coming from opposite directions, and attempted to maneuver a trap.

The quarry's car turned abruptly, however, and shot by Beatty and Nash at top speed. The negroes fired twice at the patrol car, narrowly missing the officers. Glass was shattered inside the patrol car. Nash drew his weapon and fired several times at the fleeing car, he said.

Meanwhile, Bishop and Sykes continued after the car, radioing for help. Five other patrol cars hurried to aid, converging from various points. These included a car containing Lieutenant R. H. McLain, who spotted the wanted vehicle on Old West street, near Boulevard.

The car sped into a wide alley and eluded McLain, who was following so closely he was not in a position to make a sharp turn. A few minutes later, Bishop and Sykes picked up the trail on Piedmont avenue, near Houston street. The car sped down Houston and was lost.

tar, carbon monoxide and pyridine. "There is much conflicting evidence," he said, "as to effects of smoking on the nerves, digestive system, and the heart. However, we are confining our experiments to the physical effects of nicotine alone on tissues—and we consider our work as just begun."

4 Burn to Death

SPRINGFIELD, N. J., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Four children were burned to death in their beds tonight when fire swept through their one and a half story frame building home.

ART

Too Nude ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 5.—(UP)—The Rev. Mary Ellis, white-haired crusading evangelist, was so upset today about Thomas Hart Benton's "Susanna and the Elders" tonight that she was considering organizing a protest parade against the museum where the picture hangs.

"This woman isn't nude—she is just stark naked," the 65-year-old crusader said. "I've never seen such a thing in a painting before. There's nothing left to the imagination. This painting shows the horrible effect of the breakdown of morality in the modern world."

Consideration of the protest parade was the outgrowth of a mass meeting called by Mrs. Ellis to determine whether the picture was "artistic nudity" or "just plain nakedness."

Speakers voted unanimously in favor of the "nakedness" verdict and immediately began circulation of petitions demanding removal of the painting.

"Susanna and the Elders" represents an incident from the Apocrypha and the Douay version of the Bible. Benton transferred the story to the Ozarks.

Susanna, a young girl with long, high-heeled slippers and waved hair, sits on a creek bank, her clothing strewn around her while two elders stand in the bushes behind her, looking on raply.

In Kansas City, Benton remarked he thought Mrs. Ellis' criticism was "funny as hell."

A committee of 500, organized by Mrs. Ellis, reported "it is not a study of the nude but a study of the naked woman."

Octogenarians Carry Off Honors Competing With the Youngsters

Remember how youthful looking Mary Astor, above, is in "Listen Darling?" Entirely too young-looking to be the mother of Judy Garland, her screen daughter in that picture. And yet we all know Miss Astor is not so very young. She knows the secret of preserving her complexion, and thereby her facial loveliness by use of proper creams.

"Knuckling" Lubrication Revives Complexion

By Lillian Mae.

There is a Fifth Avenue beauty specialist who, when she says "Knuckle-up, girls," is not referring to the use of boxing gloves. She has reference to a method by which you may keep your skin smooth and satiny during the hard-on-the-complexion months of February and March.

She recommends not just lubrication, but exercise and lubrication. Exercise is necessary to keep your glands alert and active and to make them produce their full and fair quota of oil and lubrication is necessary to help replace the natural oils which are exhausted by cold drying winds and overheated houses.

This authority on beauty has designed a special lubricant which has an almond base, is exceptionally fine, and melts immediately into the skin. It is perfect for massage application because its fine consistency means there is no pull, no skin stretching, for it is "knuckled" into the skin surface and its almond base has healing and soothing properties.

Now for the "knuckling" business. First close your hand into a fist and then move your rounded knuckles in quick rotation—up the neck to the center chin—

Skating Is Good Winter-Time Exercise

By Ida Jean Kain.

If you have any notion that the octogenarians are strictly a group of venerable but feeble gentlemen who creak when they walk and are loathe to stride from a comfortable armchair, you ought to pay a visit to the New York Athletic Club. Some of its 70 and 80-year-old members are still going so strong that they carry off the honors in competition with much younger athletes.

There's Mr. O. L. Richard, known as the No. 1 man of the club. Mr. Richard's membership dates from 1875 and fellow club members were pleased but not greatly surprised awhile back when they heard he had won the ice-skating contest in St. Moritz. As a matter of fact, it was rather expected of him, as he has won a number of other contests and keeps in training by skating every other day. When he can't arrange this, Mr. Richard turns to golf, but he finds it tame sport compared with ice skating and with the boxing and wrestling of his younger days.

On the other hand, Mr. Robert H. Goffe, who is only 78, gets plenty of exercise and enjoyment out of golf. He is a charter member of the famous Winged Foot Golf Club and plays there several times a week. Mr. Goffe, who is also in his seventies, used to be a middle distance runner and his sharp eyesight is an endless topic of discussion at the important track meets where he acts as timer. A man to be in fine physical condition to have such good eyesight at that age.

These veterans owe their splendid health to the lifelong practice of getting enough exercise. When a man is in superb condition as 70, you may be sure that he has always kept fit.

Most of the Athletic Club members are business or professional men with no more time for exercise than you have. But they have found that regular workouts at a gymnasium help them to keep up the pace of business. They go two or three times a week, do stretching exercises, practice with dumbbells, or jog about the track or play hand tennis—less strenuous than regular tennis—for their exercise. The main idea is not to excel at any of these athletic feats, but to keep their efficiency at its zenith until they are ready to retire. That is exactly what the average man wants to do.

If you are too pressed for time to engage in the sports activities that will keep you fit, join a good gymnasium—not one that attempts to turn you into a strong man, but one that is satisfied with keeping you in top form. And if you can't do that, practice your calisthenics at home. In any event, get your exercise and get it regular. Regular physical activity will increase and prolong your efficiency.

foods and dietetics; they know all the latest theories on child care. But do you, for instance, in your stylish lace hat and trim coat, know a Chippendale chair when you see one? Do you know how a drapery has to be made in order to hang properly? Do you recognize the main periods of designs reproduced in the familiar things you use in your home?

Good Reproductions.

Then why not either get your own club to start a study of interior decoration or else organize a club for that very purpose. Use a good basic book on furniture for your text. Supplement it with visits to local stores where you can see good reproductions of the good standard types of historical designs. Use samples of wallpaper and chintz to illustrate your various studies. And use them to plan ensembles for various rooms. Take up types of fine china, different motifs in oriental rugs, various fabrics, modern lighting, and all the other phases of interior decorating. Have various members report on significant books on the subject. Let members bring their problems up for discussion.

I'll guarantee that you won't be bored if you embark on a club program like that! Let me know what you think of the idea. If readers are interested, I'll be glad to send a suggested outline for a course of club study like this.

MY DAY First Lady's "Dot" Shows Jealous Streak

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—Yesterday I lunched with Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the secretary of state, and a small congenial group. A party at which general conversation can take place always seems to me to be much more real society than a party at which you are obliged to talk only to your neighbors on either side.

In the afternoon I had two appointments. One was with a most interesting couple who have worked theoretically and practically for many years on a plan of life which they think will bring about a really informed and responsible democracy as well as a greater united effort for the well-being of the majority of the people. It was interesting to listen to them, though I confess to no great optimism about any changes to be brought about rapidly.

My next visitors were three young people and then guests who were staying for the night began to arrive. The evening reception was given last night for the Army and Navy and was the last of the season. This reception is always colorful and usually the largest of the year because more of those invited live in or near Washington. Twelve hundred people passed in line. Usually no one stops for more than a murmured good evening, but occasionally someone really tries to say something. Often I want to say something, but the person is by before I even realize who it is.

Last night one lady told me that she had enjoyed seeing our horses at the Fort Myer horse show and had particularly liked my "Dot." I am told that "Dot," instead of showing the indifference to her surroundings that her age would lead one to suspect, on the second evening of the show pranced about like a young thing and brought me an undesired reputation for riding anything so spirited. The truth of the matter is that she is a wise "woman" and when I am on her back she behaves very well indeed.

Yesterday morning it rained and I was induced to go up to the riding hall to try two of the horses they thought I might like because everyone is afraid that "Dot" might give out and then I will have no horse I can ride. One polo pony had very nice gaits and I liked her very much, but I felt I should end the morning by riding "Dot" in order not to hurt her feelings. However, when I mounted, I found she was going to show me how she felt about being kept waiting while I tried other horses, so I had a dose of her most spirited behavior.

All the state functions are now over. I had a large formal luncheon today and, of course, musicals and teas go on at intervals when I am here. From present indications the spring and early summer will be unusually busy so far as evening entertainments go, even more active than the winter season, because of the various important people who are coming over for the World's Fair in New York city and the one in San Francisco, Cal.

Be Your Own Teacher

That half-apologetic note in Fred's voice, "Betty's a dear—but her interests are pretty limited!"

What a shock to realize people are making excuses for us—"she left school early," "he's been too busy to acquire a cultural background."

It's easy to make friends really proud of you, to become an alert well-informed person—able to hold your own with educated people socially and in business. But where to begin—what to learn? Follow a simple plan of study—start with the subjects that pop up in your everyday life.

You're charmed by a broadcast from faraway Brazil? Eagerly you dip into a travel book that paints for you this vast tropical land watered by the mighty Amazon.

Do you like American history? Then let that be your specialty. Absorb the tales about the Virginia pioneers who, upon moving on into the wilderness, burned their houses and saved the nails. But, to go steadily on and up in life, base your special interest on a sound foundation of college subjects.

Our 40-page booklet, "Suppose You Haven't Gone to College," outlines a simple program for home study, recommends books on science, psychology, philosophy, literature, other college subjects. Tells how to make use of today's free resources for self-education.

Poverty Blamed For Marital Unhappiness

By Caroline Chatfield.

CHEMISTRY: Love, the sweet elixir, occasionally crystallizes to form the hex powder of hate. Love, that makes the bachelor as bold as a lion, reduces the widower to floundering fear of his own children.

"We'd never have been separated if we'd had more money," writes a young divorcee. "We were too poor to be happy and so matters went from bad to worse." Let's see, young lady, how that diagram: According to the dictionary health is the first requisite for happiness and peace of mind the second. We need one little headache or one funny flip of the heart to accept that definition as correct. Money won't buy either.

Money won't make us amiable, agreeable, loyal or loving which mean it won't enable us to get on amicably with our house-mates. We can't swap our silver for self-control, nor plaster our tongues down with greenbacks, nor sweeten our sour dispositions with possessions. "Out of the heart are the issues of life," said the wise Solomon, not out of the purse; though in fact the contents of the purse give a good line on the issues. The contents of the purse show up our characters without changing them one iota.

If it were otherwise, the rich would automatically become unselfish, lovable, admirable, easy to live with and supremely happy. Are they? And the hard-pressed would be mean, little short-shorts, hateful and unhappy. Are they?

No use to pretend that money doesn't oil the machinery and make it sing sweetly; no use to pretend that it doesn't give us advantages; outlets, pleasures, thrills and then some. After which it has shot its wad.

On the other hand, poverty is a vice that squeezes as uncomfortably as putting the screws too far in and make the best of it. Either way it's a grand exercise for a young couple starting the long climb, exercise that binds them together and even if they don't manage to build a big bank account they build character.

Yes, money will put a young pair on easy street where they don't have to struggle with outside circumstances; but money won't take the struggle of their adjustment to one another. Money will give them a swell sense of independence of people around them, and of each other. There's the rub and there's the principal reason why money doesn't spell married happiness.

The Obsession Of Germ Killing

By Dr. William Brady.

Every d. f. knows that it is necessary to kill the germs in order to fight a "cold" or prevent or cure sore throat. What germs, where they are, how to get at them and whether they can be destroyed without seriously damaging the tissues in the vicinity.

Breaking down the natural local defenses against invasion of the system are trifling technical questions which do not worry the d. f.

Every M. D. knows or should know that it is practically impossible to kill or even to check the growth or multiplication of germs in any tissue of the body after the germs have invaded the tissue to establish what is generally recognized as an infection, such as acute sore throat or acute coryza or any form of cri.

Every so often the medical profession falls, and the bigger they are the harder they fall, for some brand-new synthetic which purports to single out and destroy disease germs in the tissues without doing serious harm to the tissues. From "606" down to sulfanilamide, none of these germ-killers has survived long. The latest, sulfanilamide, has caused some rather serious by-effects in a good many cases. I doubt that sulfanilamide will last longer than any of its numerous predecessors did.

But the use of internal medicines in the treatment of disease is above and beyond the understanding of laymen in any case.

What I am trying to make clear is the well established fact that no safe germ-killer has been discovered, if by "safe" we mean that the remedy is incapable of doing harm.

As far as the prevention or treatment of the cri is concerned, that is, any nose or throat infection you happen to have, of course it is silly to imagine that a remedy applied to the surface can possibly kill or even check the growth or multiplication of germs which have already invaded the tissues. And certainly it is silly to imagine that anybody suffers any symptom or symptoms attributable to any such infection before the infection has occurred.

The mere presence of disease germs in the secretions of nose or throat or on the surface of the mucous membrane lining the nose or throat, is insignificant. Kill 'em or leave 'em alone—it makes no particular difference so far as your health is concerned, although the use of antiseptic gargles, sprays and the like may

Barbara Stanwyck, Hollywood star, introduces this new hair style, designed to accompany very young-looking or simple gowns. The hair is taken out to each side and parted in the center, with soft, wavy bangs covering half the forehead. Masses of loose curls at the side and back frame the face.

Unsophisticated Coiffure For Young-Looking Gowns

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 5.—Barbara Stanwyck introduces a new unsophisticated hair style in "Union Pacific" that must be worn with very young-looking or simple gowns. (This is quite a change from the up-sweep coiffure that adds 10 years at least to a lady's looks.)

First a word about Barbara's locks, before describing one of the gowns that go with it. The hair is taken out to each side and parted in the center, with soft, wavy bangs covering half her forehead. Masses of loose curls at the side and back made a cute frame for her face.

And now for the dress. Of white silk organza (the material reminds me of my "best" frock when aged 8), the evening gown has "string" shoulder straps and pin-tuck ruffling around the camisole decolletage. The skirt flows to the ankles in soft billowy folds. Sole jewel ornaments are a black ebony head bracelet and necklace.

According to Milo Anderson, Warner fashion expert, velvet should be in vogue the whole year round, and he has designed velvet accessories to go with a spring print for Olivia de Havilland. The latter features a dainty floral pattern of ripe cherries and green leaves on a light pink background.

A wide diagonal casket of black velvet is laced on the dress material. And Olivia's tiny black velvet hat has a pink rose pinned to the headband. Interesting are the accompanying black velvet gloves.

Nan Grey, appearing in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," says that her favorite ensemble in her spring wardrobe is a suit of imported tweed. The jacket, a mixture of blue, yellow, green and beige woven on a soft brown ground, is wrist-length, with a double button fastening from neck to waistline, where it cuts away slightly, showing an opening about two inches wide. Beige suede, saddle-stitched in brown, forms a second collar over the first one of the tweed. The skirt, of the same tweed, is severely simple.

Joan Bennett, at a recent premiere, wore a white satin evening gown brocaded with large gold bowknots. The frock, fashioned with fitted bodice and very full skirt, was worn with a short bolero with leg-of-mutton sleeves, gold bow-knot in her hair, gold bracelets and earrings, gold bag and sandals were attractive accessories. Her wrap—a full-length white fox cape.

The combination of black and white is always good. A new spring outfit for Jane Wyman has a white taffeta turban with a high cluster of taffeta flowers and a scrap of open mesh across her nose. Her black crepe dress carries a white taffeta bow embroidered in black as a side belt accent. Black crepe pants, with white embroidered daisies on the toes, complete the black-and-white combination.

Barbara Bell's Tie-Back Dress

It isn't often that you find a house dress that does favors to your figure and has decided style of its own—but here is just such a house dress. In fact, this design (1682-B) really deserves to be made up in thin wool or sports silk for street wear, as well as in such home-keeping cottons as percale, calico and gingham. This dress has a very flattering line because the skirt flares and the skirt seams continue up into the bodice, giving nice fullness to the bust. The sash belt, tied in the front, enables you to make the waistline as snug as you please.

But never doubt that this is a comfortable dress to work in. The armholes are ample, the waistline unhampering. And of course everybody likes the button-front style because it's so easy to get into and iron.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1682-B is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Corresponding bust measurements 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 (34) requires 4 3/4 yards of 35-inch material; 4 yards of broad.

Home of Stephen Lynch Jr. At Miami Beach Is Described

By Sally Forth.

ACCORDING to Atlantians returning from Miami the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Lynch Jr. is one of the resort's most attractive residences. Situated on Sunset Island, the home, which is the last word in modern structure, is built of white stucco and overlooks one of Miami's picturesque waterways.

The walls of the spacious oval-shaped living room are done in a dusty rose pink that harmonizes with the draperies in a lighter rose shade. An excellent view of the surrounding gardens and water is afforded through the living room's vast plate glass bay window. A pair of especially designed sofas upholstered in a soft blue shade, and made with slanting backs and curved legs, is arranged at the window.

The Italian-designed dining room features an emerald green and white color motif and is furnished with magnificent pieces of Italian furniture of an off-white shade. Emerald green satin covers the chairs and matches the draperies that outline the bay windows facing the adjoining grassy plot. A marble-top sideboard of exquisite workmanship and a coffee table carved in scroll design and featuring a top of deep cut glass are outstanding pieces furnishing the dining room.

Natural cypress forms the walls of the library where bookshelves and built-in cabinets conceal radios and victrolas. By the way, Sally was interested to hear that victrolas are a hobby of young Steve Lynch.

Among the most attractive of the three upstairs bedrooms is the one decorated in sky blue and shocking pink shades. Blue tufted satin covers the central head board for the twin beds. Reaching almost half-way to the ceiling the head board is topped by a gold scroll design. Shocking pink satin is introduced on the dressing table and seat and a rug of this shade covers the floor. By the way, Sally is informed that this very modish shade of pink is Mrs. Lynch's favorite color.

According to Atlanta friends, Steve Lynch's bride is one of Miami Beach's most attractive young matrons. Noted for her charming manner, Mrs. Lynch makes a gracious chateau presiding over the beautiful Sunset Island home.

RIDING at anchor on the placid blue waters of St. Andrews bay at Panama City, Fla., is "The Grace," the magnificent yacht owned by R. J. Cullen, president of the International Paper Company. The handsome cruiser dropped anchor there Thursday and from its deck stepped Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Hammond, a prominent bride couple who spent several days of their wedding trip aboard the vessel before leaving for Jamaica for the remainder of their honeymoon.

Mrs. Hammond, you know, is the former Grace Powell, and her marriage to Ed Hammond, of Baltimore and the Eastern Shore of Maryland, was a social event of the last of January. The offer of his yacht for their honeymoon was a gracious gesture on the part of Mr. Cullen, and a particularly appropriate one, for the reason that the vessel is named for the charming bride.

AS A PART of their initiation, freshmen members of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity at the University of Georgia were recently ordered to draw from a hat slips of paper on which were written names of animals. Each freshman was then told to bring a living representative of the name he drew to a party dinner at the fraternity house.

Of course the menagerie which appeared at the dinner resembled a barnyard scene, the group including such animals as cats, goats, possums, chickens and dogs. The funniest specimen to appear, however, was Rannie Geissler, whose nickname is "pig."

Clubs Plan Exhibit For Garden Center

A group of garden clubs will plan interesting exhibits during February at the Garden Center. The Clifton Road, on each Friday, will feature table decorations, this week carrying out the Valentine motif. The Garden Division of the College Park Woman's Club will exhibit a miniature house, the design and planting of the garden to be developed throughout the month. Other clubs exhibiting will be the Gladiolus, Hawthorne and Garden Division of West End Civic Club.

Last week Mrs. J. A. Dunaway, of Lake Claire Garden Club, arranged a Valentine mantel, with red berries and foliage in a low bowl, with red tapers on either side. For the Cheshire Bridge Garden Club, Mrs. E. M. Brown combined aucuba and nandina berries in a copper container. Exquisite pink amaryllis were grown by Mrs. J. C. McCleskey, of Garden Division of West End Woman's Club, who also displayed an interesting dish garden. Mrs. Ben T. Jerome, member of the same club, brought figurines holding small flowers which she had made.

A Chinese evergreen was entered by Mrs. J. C. Brown, of Garden Division of Hapeville Woman's Club, and sprays of yellow jasmine were arranged in a copper jar by Mrs. Hugh A. Smith for Hawthorne Garden Club. Pink and rose carnations, floating in a low bowl, were displayed by Mrs. J. V. Nicholson, and Mrs. David B. NEW YORK STOCK HOUSE, INC., SAYS 'FULL HOUSE OF GOODS'

MANUFACTURERS READY TO SERVE VISITING DEALERS

Unusually Well Stocked To Care for Merchants During
'Spring Trade Week.'

"Spring Trade Week," beginning today, February 6, will find Atlanta wholesalers and manufacturers all "set" and ready for the army of visiting merchant-buyers from Georgia and adjoining states who are expected in Atlanta.

Perhaps none among Atlanta's many wholesalers and manufacturers supplying the southern trade are better stocked or better equipped to make a trip advantageous to retailers than is the New York Stock House, Inc., at 206-208 Pryor street, S. W.

This big concern is emphasizing the fact that visitors will find a "full house of goods, where they will always find a complete line of women's, misses' and children's ready-to-wear, with immediate deliveries."

A trip through the large manufacturing plant on South Pryor street is most interesting. One can see there a production force turning out 10,000 dresses per week. During the past 12 months, due to a fast growing trade, the concern has been compelled to double its capacity. It started a number of years ago with 15 machines and 22 people in the manufacture of merchandise. This has been gradually increased until today it has 200 employees, working approximately the year round, with 150 machines, produce a vast amount of ready-to-wear goods.

"At all times our representatives are coming New York for the best merchandise available for the approval of 2,500 customers," said L. D. Weitz, president of the New York Stock House. "Atlanta is fast becoming the distributing center of the southeast, due to the diligent efforts to bring the newest that is made and shown in the eastern markets for buyers who make the New York Stock House their source of supply."

"The New York Stock House are pioneers in the manufacture of $1.98 retailers in this section, and today has become the style leader in this price range for the entire section. The distribution covers almost half of the United States, and among our patrons is included many leading department store and chain organizations in various parts of the country."

Due to the increased demand for children's dresses, that department of the concern has been so enlarged as to create many thousands of dresses in the popular price ranges, and they are now better than ever able to supply the needs of their patrons in this department. Size ranges include ones to threes, threes to sixes, sixes to fourteens, eights to sixteens.

Mr. Weitz issues an invitation to his many friends to visit him during the spring opening and to make his big plant their headquarters while in Atlanta.

Bob Bates Now Service Manager Southern Buick

With an intimate knowledge of the automobile industry in all its branches as keen as his knowledge and love for athletics, R. D. (Bob) Bates, born and reared in Atlanta, has just been appointed service manager for Southern Buick, Inc., located at corner of Spring and Harris streets, the announcement of his selection for this important post being made by J. W. Lambert, president of the automobile company.

Bob Bates, young and aggressive, has fairly grown up in the auto business. He has spent 15 years studying the various ramifications of the auto industry—construction, sales, service and practically every other feature that would qualify a man for expert auto service in any line. However, he has found time to devote to athletics, which he loves like a kitten loves hot milk.

Bates has been with Buick for three years. In years past he has been connected with other lines, and has attended factory schools for Ford and Buick at Baltimore, Memphis, Jacksonville, Charlotte and many other cities. He knows automobiles from the front bumper, including what's under the hood, to the tail license tag. In various capacities through which he has served automobile manufacturers and dealers in the past 15 years he has been successful and popular. Not only his technical knowledge has made him strong with the auto industry, but being a young man of splendid character, with personality a-plenty, he has made scores of friends in the business, social and athletic world.

Bob entered work with Southern Buick, Inc., about 18 months ago as used car manager. From that time on he has been gradually promoted, heading various important places. Now he has been placed as service manager, a position which he is unusually well qualified to fill. Under him will work 60 to 75 expert mechanics, with a general group of workers more or less under his direction numbering about 125. He invites his friends and motoring public generally to drop into his splendid, well-equipped and modern service station, where any and all manner of repairs or service work of any kind is guaranteed to be satisfactory to every customer.

CAN HATCH 435,000 EGGS AT ONE TIME EVERY THREE WEEKS

Blue Ribbon Hatchery, From Small Beginning, Grows to Big Plant.

From a small beginning in his back yard some 30 years ago, where he took from beneath the mother hen a small brood of newly hatched chicks, to the owner and director now of a hatchery capable of turning off nearly a half-million fluffy little chicks every three weeks, is the interesting and successful experience of J. I. Hosford, head of the Blue Ribbon Hatchery, located at 215 Forsyth street, S. W., in this city.

Not only does Mr. Hosford, aided by his estimable wife, look after the details of his Atlanta hatchery, declared to be the largest in the south, but he is much interested in and aids in managing the affairs of two other large hatcheries—one the Georgia-Carolina Hatchery, 1025 Broad street, Augusta, the other the Coastal Hatcheries, 312-14 West Bay street, Savannah.

Just now these hatcheries are going in full swing, and are shipping their very excellent breeds of the little feathery tribe all over the southern states. Even in California, New York and other distant points, customers are supplied from time to time, and shipments have been made as far away as South America. The unique "Baby Chick Pullman," used by the hatchery, affords ample and comfortable transportation for their baby chicks (usually by mail) to any point. The hatchery guarantees 100 per cent live arrival, prepay all postage, and assure prompt delivery.

The Blue Ribbon Hatchery is the only officially approved hatchery in Atlanta by the United States Agricultural Department. It is most interesting to stroll through the big hatchery on South Forsyth street. Large brooders and feeders are filled with the fluffy little tribe, and the thousands of little chicks seen scratching and scampering about make a feast for the eyes of any who are interested in poultry raising.

The Atlanta hatchery has a capacity of 435,000 eggs at one time every three weeks. Of course, not that many little chicks are continuously brought from the shell, but the plant here does turn out about 1,500,000 per year. Every well-known and popular breed is hatched off—something like 15 different breeds being represented in the list offered by the hatchery. The most popular type of chicks now being supplied, says Mr. Hosford, is the type that sells for $7.45 per 100, or $7 in 500 lots. Rhode Island Reds, Barred Rocks, Buff Orpingtons, White Wyandottes, White Leghorns—almost any breed known in the chicken world is available at the Blue Ribbon Hatchery.

"Every flock we get eggs from is selected for its exceptional qualities," said Mr. Hosford. "In near-

MENDEL COMPANY INVITE MERCHANTS

Slogan of the Company Is
'The House With the Goods.'

Retail merchants throughout Georgia and the southeast who will be visitors to Atlanta during "spring trade week," which opens today, will find a warm welcome and a fine selection of merchandise upon a visit to the well-known wholesale distributors, H. Mendel & Company, Inc., at 185-187 Pryor street, S. W.

This company has been engaged in the wholesale distribution of dry goods, notions, furnishings, ladies' ready-to-wear, novelty accessories, men's and boys' clothing, and such like merchandise for a number of years and has established a reputation among buyers for retail concerns second to none in the southeast.

In the past few weeks the company has been making some very important changes in its floor space—remodeling two floors. By doing this it is doubling the size of its ladies' and children's ready-to-wear departments by making its entire third floor a floor devoted exclusively to ready-to-wear items—featuring infants', children's, misses' and ladies' garments. This improvement will make this department the largest of its kind in this part of the country, so officials of the company say.

The second improvement is an enlargement of the men's furnishings department, which likewise will have about twice as much space as heretofore. The fourth floor will now house its remodeled men's and boys' department, giving every case these flocks are the result of chicks bought direct from specialty breeders or in some other manner have been highly fused with new blood from the country's leading sources. Another circumstance that is strongly in favor of Blue Ribbon chicks is the fact that they are produced under the national poultry improvement plan and have official supervision. The United States Department of Agriculture in their bulletin No. 300 has this to say: "Under the plan the quality of chicks is described in uniform terms in all parts of the country. Protection from unscrupulous competition is thereby afforded, and producers and purchasers are able to buy with confidence."

In addition to the selling of little chicks, the Atlanta hatchery carries in stock all manner of equipment for chicken raisers—brooders, feeders, founts, brooder thermometers, foods, medicines, disinfectants, and many other articles for the poultry raiser.

TARZAN AND THE ELEPHANT MEN No. 97

As Hyark reached for his sword, Tarzan's steel-thewed fingers seized his wrist. With a quick, powerful jerk, the mighty Tarzan swung his opponent around, then clutched him from behind. The giant struggled, but Tarzan held him helpless in a grip of steel.

Thus the ape-man had nullified Hyark's threat, but now another peril was moving down on both the gladiators in the form of the ravenous lion which had just been let out of his cage. The spectators were in an uproar. The wild man's feat had captured their fancy.

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

They laughed and jeered at Hyark. They yelled warnings to his conqueror that the lion was coming, but Tarzan knew that already. From the corner of an eye he was watching the savage carnivore. As it came closer he could appraise its strength and weakness.

It was a small lion, old and pitifully emaciated. Evidently it had been starved for a long time to make it ravenous. Tarzan's anger rose against those who had been responsible for this cruelty. And in his mind was born a reckless plan—to avenge the wretched beast!

COMMONS GUARDED FOREIGN NEWS ITALY HEDGES HUNGARIANS OUSTED CIVILIANS BOMBED

BRITAIN

Irish Ire
LONDON, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Increased guards were thrown around Buckingham Palace and British's famous houses of parliament today following discovery of a bizarre conspiracy rivaling the 17th century "gunpowder plot" to blow them up.

Scotland Yard officials, who attribute the recent wave of bombings in England to the King-hating, outlawed Irish Republican army, said details of the plot were uncovered in a raid at Belfast, in northern Ireland.

They immediately pressed into service 10,000 extra police to guard the country's vital services and historic buildings.

A special guard watched Windsor Castle, where King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were on a week-end holiday.

Some quarters likened the plot against the houses of parliament with the frustrated attempt in 1605 to blow up the historic buildings during agitation against anti-Catholic laws enforced by King James I.

Despite Scotland Yard's elaborate weekend precautions, there were spasmodic outbreaks of terrorism.

Incendiary bombs were set off in four stores at Coventry. An explosion blew out a part of Walton prison at Liverpool where a number of persons accused of taking part in the terrorist activities were held.

MEXICO

Batista Cheered
MEXICO CITY, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Colonel Fulgencio Batista, Cuba's strong man, told a cheering crowd of 25,000 Mexicans today that "should the independence of Mexico be threatened you can count on Cuba's support."

Batista, on a good-will tour, spoke before a group of labor unions headed by the Confederation of Mexican Workers.

"We have the sympathies of the United States in the hope for solidarity among nations of America," he said.

Vicente Toledano, confederation leader, received an ovation when he told the throng that Mexico was standing back of France, England and other countries in opposing Fascism.

He declared Mexico, Cuba and the United States were "united by the ideal of liberty and democracy" and in their front against totalitarianism "have the support of the workers of all republics of this hemisphere."

The Kuling foreigners have several radio receivers and it was expected that they were aware of the situation but still were unable to communicate with the outside world. American and British authorities asserted that almost anything could happen to the stranded resort populace unless the Japanese postponed their attack, for which they have shown no inclination.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA
Border Battling.
PRAGUE, Feb. 5.—(UP)—Official reports from Chust tonight said that fighting, allegedly provoked by Hungarians, broke out on the Carpatho-Ukrainian border near Radwan, Saturday night and lasted until tonight.

It was reported that rockets were fired at 9:30 p. m. Saturday from the Hungarian side. Heavy gun fire was then directed toward the Carpatho-Ukrainian border, the report said.

Sunday morning 25 Hungarian terrorists followed by Hungarian soldiers with machine guns approached the border and opened fire, according to the reports. The Czechs replied. A Czech liaison officer succeeded in reaching the Hungarians at 4 p. m. and the firing ceased. An inquiry will be held tomorrow.

CHILE
Wings Southward.
LANGLEY FIELD, Va., Feb. 4. (UP)—The United States' largest bombing plane, a "super flying fortress" laden with 3,200 pounds of Red Cross contributions for relief of earthquake victims in South America, will leave Lima, Peru, at 10 p. m. (Atlanta time) tonight for Santiago, Chile, radio reports received here said.

The plane was expected to reach Santiago at about 7 a. m. Monday.

Major N. M. Stewart, communications chief at Langley Field, said the flight had been uneventful so far. Although the Boeing is flying medical supplies to the Chilean earthquake zone, the flight was planned under orders simulating war conditions and plans were kept secret until shortly before the take-off to test the air corps' efficiency in preparing quickly for a major flight.

Wings Northward
MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 5.—(AP)—Norman Armour, United States ambassador to Chile, changed planes here tonight on a flight to Washington.

CHINA

Civilians Bombed.
SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Chinese reports from Chungking today asserted Japanese planes caused an estimated 1,000 casualties among the populace of Wansien in a bombing raid.

Wansien is on the Yangtze, approximately 135 miles airline northeast of Chungking.

Chinese said the bombers were bound for Chungking but, on being intercepted by Chinese aircraft, dropped 100 bombs on Wansien and then turned back.

Chinese asserted there had been important guerrilla victories in the Yangtze valley and that Japanese in Shansi and Suiyuan provinces had been checked by counterattacks.

Americans Marooned
SHANGHAI, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Fears for the safety of 12 Americans and 53 other foreigners marooned in Kuling increased tonight with the failure of American authorities to establish contact with them.

Japanese warned last Friday that the foreigners should leave the mountain-top resort before February 10 because of a planned offensive against Chinese guerrillas.

(Kuling, south of the Yangtze river, is 125 miles airline south-east of Hankow.)

A ring of some 5,000 Chinese guerrillas encircled the mountain, which is deep in Japanese-occupied territory. There was a belief here the Chinese would not permit the foreigners to depart, but instead would use them as a shield before the expected Japanese attack.

The Kuling foreigners have several radio receivers and it was expected that they were aware of the situation but still were unable to communicate with the outside world. American and British authorities asserted that almost anything could happen to the stranded resort populace unless the Japanese postponed their attack, for which they have shown no inclination.

ITALY
Hedge on Pledge
ROME, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Virgilio Gayda, authoritative Fascist editor, suggested today the possibility that Italian troops would remain in Spain even after Spanish insurgents occupied the entire country.

The Fascist grand council early today had served notice that Italian volunteers "will not abandon" the Spanish struggle "before it is ended, as it must end, with Franco's victory."

Gayda indicated this victory would not be considered won until the Insurgents had consolidated their political domination of Spain as well as military control.

(One of the points in the Anglo-Italian pact signed last April 16 was withdrawal of all Italian fighters and war materials from Spain at the end of the civil war, if not completed earlier.)

Gayda said the Spanish government forces and their supporters, "although beaten at arms, are not disarming in the political field."

He charged that "new pressure and diplomatic intervention" were being planned against the Insurgents.

"Therefore, German and Italian assistance to the Nationalists (Insurgents) cannot be reduced," he said.

"To military victory, complete political victory must be added," he continued.

"Until total liquidation of Red (government) arms and armies in Spain and adjacent territories, where they were previously organized and where they find periodic refuge and assistance, until renunciation of every other undue, effective, political intervention, the victory of Franco cannot be said to be complete and assured."

JAPAN
Action Demanded
TOKYO, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Political parties were drafting a joint resolution today demanding the government adopt a more aggressive policy toward Soviet Russia.

The action, in which all groups were taking part, apparently resulted from announcements of clashes last week on the Manchoukuo-Siberia border.

There were no further reports today of the border situation.

The Manchoukuo government reported Saturday that, beginning last Tuesday, there had been four days of almost continuous fighting between Soviet Russian forces and

ALASKA

Food Shortage.
CORDOVA, Alaska, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Supplies of fresh foods were almost exhausted today in stores of many Alaskan towns which were cut off from direct steamer contact with the United States because of a labor dispute in Seattle.

Butter and egg supplies were sold out. Ketchikan and Juneau merchants also reported shortages. Staple supplies, however, may last about two weeks.

The three-day-old dispute in Seattle began when members of the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union walked off ships preparing to sail for Alaska.

YUGOSLAVIA
Stoyadinovich Out
BELGRADE, February 6.—(Monday)—(AP)—Dragisa Ovetkovich, experienced political leader, described as a Serb willing to listen to the vigorous complaints of the Croat minority, became premier of Yugoslavia today.

Forty-six-year-old Ovetkovich took the oath of office at 1 a. m. and presented to the regent, Prince Paul, a politically balanced cabinet.

The new premier succeeded Milan Stoyadinovich who unexpectedly resigned yesterday when his cabinet split on the Croat issue. Stoyadinovich had been premier since 1935.

Stoyadinovich was dropped completely from the cabinet, contrary to some forecasts, the new premier turning down suggestions that the retiring premier be retained as foreign minister.

Stoyadinovich in considerable measure has been responsible for closer relations with the Rome-Berlin axis.

The new foreign minister is Alexander Cincar-Markovic, a veteran diplomat who under the previous regime was minister to Germany and who also had served in Rome.

HUNGARY
Synagogues Guarded
BUDAPEST, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Strong police guards kept close watch over synagogues today while the government enforced martial law to quell political violence which flared Friday with the bombing of Budapest's largest Jewish temple.

To the casual observer the appearance of the police reinforcements around the Jewish houses of worship offered the only indication martial law was in effect.

The drastic martial law decree was issued following a cabinet session last night at which Friday's bombing in which 20 persons were injured, was the subject of lengthy discussion.

The blast at the main entrance of the Dohany street synagogue was set off as parliament a mile away was discussing liberalizing amendments to a proposed law for the strict regulation of Jews in Hungary.

RUSSIA
Hungarian Huff
MOSCOW, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Tass, official Soviet Russian news agency, announced that Hungarian Minister Michael Jungsgerth-Arnold had left Moscow tonight following Russia's request that Hungary close her legation here.

(The Soviet government notified Hungary Thursday it was closing its Budapest legation and asking the Budapest government to follow suit here because of Hungary's January 13 decision to join the Italian-German-Japanese anti-Comintern pact.)

ALGERIA
U. S. Ship Seized
ALGER, Algeria, Feb. 5.—(AP)—French authorities seized the American freighter Wisconsin today on a complaint from members of the crew that her master had failed to pay their wages.

(Lloyd's register lists the Wisconsin as a 6,076-ton vessel owned by the Bulk Carriers Corporation and her port of registry as Portland, Ore.)

The crew members charged more than $10,000 was due them. The Wisconsin arrived from Bone, Algeria, five days ago.

VATICAN
Pope Pleased
VATICAN CITY, Feb. 5.—(AP)—Pope Pius XI today entered a week which may produce a new chapter in relations between the Holy See and Italy and which he said would be "rich in memories."

The 17th anniversary of his election as pope will be marked tomorrow.

Saturday will be the 10th anniversary of the Lateran accord which ended 58 years of controversy between the church and state, and next Sunday will be the 17th anniversary of the pontiff's coronation.

His Holiness has taken the unusual step of summoning all Italian bishops to the Vatican for the anniversary of the Lateran accord.

Since the pontiff has described the concordat as having been "wounded" by Italian racial laws and treatment of Catholic action, a lay society, many relatives expressed the belief he planned to give the bishops a statement of the church's position in the controversy.

WARMER, SHOWERS PREDICTED FOR TODAY

Warmer temperatures will accompany showers in Atlanta today and tomorrow, Weatherman George W. Mindling predicted last night.

Today's temperature range will be between 47 degrees and 67. The low yesterday was 37, the high 52.

"Clearing skies should follow Wednesday," Mindling said.

Welcome Court Club Will Meet Thursday

"There are no stragglers here." That's the slogan and motto of the Welcome Court Social Club from now on, President Frank Gleason declared last night as he announced the club's 117th weekly party would be held by club members at 8:15 o'clock Thursday night at 26 Pine street.

"We welcome strangers and lonely people to attend our meetings and assure them that after a few Paul Jones dances they will feel they are dancing with old friends," Gleason said.

In Memoriam.
Mrs. M. White, who left us three years ago today:
As her memories linger
But hope to meet her in heaven
By God's helping grace
THE FAMILY.
Monday, February 6.
